We move so many pianos we could give lessons.

In fact we do. The professionals from Despatch Moving and Storage that pad, pack, load, drive, and unload your possessions have received hours and hours of training long before we let them touch any of your belongings, let alone your Baby.

Despatch began moving people in 1910. Even then they realized the key to successful moves wasn't just strong backs and powerful trucks. It was heart. Caring about the people they were moving and the things that made their house a home were more important.

Today, the thank you letters we receive from our clients are music to our ears. Many of the words used strike a familiar chord — careful, friendly, understanding, professional, courteous, and efficient. We're not surprised. Moving pianos is not our only forte. Our staff knows how to baby your antiques, collectibles, fine art, furniture, as well as your floors and walls. In short, if you're planning a move call us — but only if you want to be babied in grand style.

"My Favorite Thing to do is Go For a Walk on the Beach"

By Dan Rattiner

I was down at the beach the other day and the thought occurred to me — where are the people who take a walk on the beach? It was a Saturday afternoon, a wonderful sunny day with a soft, slow surf, a few fishing boats offshore and I was at Peter's Pond Beach near Ira Rennert's house and I looked left and I looked right up and down the beach and there were just a few birds. And nothing else for as far as the eye could see.

Why I bring this up is that every time I interview a celebrity or other famous person for a profile about them in Dan's Papers, they always say the same thing when I ask them how they spend their lazy days at their beach houses.

"Oh, we go for a swim in the pool, or we cook a fresh fish on the barbecue or — my favorite thing — we go for a walk on the beach."

I have interviewed Martha Stewart, Christie Brinkley, the late George Plimpton, Wilbur Ross, John McEnroe, Alec Baldwin, Mort Zuckerman, Eileen Miller, Steve Madden, Billy Joel, Al Gore, Neil Hirsch, Kathleen Turner, David Koch — the number rises to the hundreds — even into the thousands. I have been doing these interviews along with a whole bunch of other things for thirty years and more

here in the Hamptons and I can't even figure out how many of them there are. There are fifty two weeks in a year, maybe two interviews a week is one hundred and four times thirty years is over three thousand and practically all of them say their favorite thing to do in the Hamptons is take a walk on the beach. WHERE ARE THESE PEOPLE?

Let's figure it out. The beach is sixty miles long. Figure one person in a thousand is get-

Well, maybe you have to look at how often they take that stroll on the beach. Figure there are seven days in a week and figure they aren't going to stroll more than once a day, and maybe not even that — figure once every other day — I mean how often can you do something like this even if it IS your favorite thing to do?

So they go for a walk one day and then the next they say I just did that, or it's raining so they go to the next day and they want to go out again.

Then there's how FAR they walk each time. I think it's a fair guess that between the out of shape who might take a stroll for a hundred feet and then breathlessly say that's it we have to go back, and the exercise nuts who might walk ten miles each way, you probably get as an average walk maybe two miles — one mile down picking up shells — it would take about twenty minutes — and one mile back picking up more shells. A nice invigorating walk. I think everybody could agree on that.

Next you have to figure how many of them there are that walk together. I'd say on average it's two people. Sometimes it's one person, particularly if they have a black lab and a tennis ball. And sometimes it's three or four, particularly if there's a big divorce bombshell brewing and everybody knows who it is and they all want to talk about it. But mostly it's two people, because people like to share, and if one of them says oh look what a wonderful sunset, there has to be another to say, oh yes look at that.

So what you have here is a sixty-mile long beach, three million walkers divided by thirty years and then three hundred and sixty five days, but times one hundred and eighty two and a half days probably walking two mile there every other day six months a year — subtract for freezing winds, hail, snow, hurricanes and so forth and so on — and you do the math you come up with the fact that during the six months of good beach walking weather, during the average twelve hours of daylight, there should be — between the three thousand I have interviewed and the additional three million I have not interviewed — there should be one set of two walkers, arm in arm, every fifty-two feet.

Somebody is lying. I don't know who, but given that practically nobody is out there all day every day, except maybe once every other hour or so, it's about ninety eight per cent of all those I have interviewed. They present themselves as honest, upstanding citizens who have some kind of gift — for acting, singing, composing, making money, painting, writing novels, writing poems, giving to charity — who have made a contribution to society and to their pocketbooks, thereby rising to the level of either being interviewed or considered to be interviewed for Dan's Papers, and this huge percentage of them are lying.

Not all of them, mind you. And certainly not you. But for those that do, I ask, why do you DO that? You don't want to think about it? Seems like a good answer? There's something you want to cover up? Maybe you hope to get rid of me after I've been asking so many stupid questions?

I was up half the night last night thinking about this and trying to dope it out. But I couldn't. So finally, I gave up and went for a walk on the beach.

A Hotel?

Home Longer Than a Football Field Rises by the Beach in Southampton

By Dan Rattiner

People driving west along the beach down Meadow Lane in Southampton are surely shocked by what is being built on that street just two houses to the east of Cooper's Beach. On the site where a well-known millionaire had a summer home some years ago, there is going up what looks like a hotel. From end to end running parallel to the beach, there is a reinforced concrete wall 10 feet high and 359 feet from end to end — longer than a football field — that could be either a retaining wall, the side of an enormous first floor of some monster structure, or a breakwater.

It is completely out of place on the street. As you drive along the ocean from east to west on that road, you pass the beautiful old Beach Club, constructed in the stucco resort style popular in the 1900s when it was built, the Dune Church, in a gingerbread Victorian style from the 1880s, a variety of large, wood-shingled summer mansions in the cottage style from the 1920s, and then THIS. What the hell is it, and how could anybody possibly get permission to build this thing right on the beach?

Well, they did.

Under the laws of zoning, which came in during the late 1960s, a person owning a residential property on Meadow Lane could only have one physical house with one certificate of occupancy.

In 1997, this property was purchased by a man named Jay Sugarman, a Florida businessman who wanted to tear down what was there and build something of his own. This new owner is building what you see there today, as a single-family residence for his family and staff.

Sugarman apparently read the zoning laws

a guest house and a pool house, without breaking the law, with money being no object.

Sawyer/Berson submitted plans to the Southampton Village Architectural Review Board in December of 2001. On the Board at that time were Chairman Hamilton Hogue, a construction management business owner, Arnie Pastor, a well known real estate developer, R. Essay, a plumber and Cathie Bellows, the wife of Charlie Bellows, a well known landscaper. Also on the board was Mrs. C. Redding, a retiree. What the majority of the Board allowed the architects, J. Brian Sawyer and John Berson, to get away with on this project is, in my view, there is no other word for it, a disgrace.

Apparently, the architects decided to build three separate two-story buildings on an enormous reinforced concrete cellar they would build that would take up much of the property. The logic is that since all these structures are on one contiguous cellar floor, they are therefore one "house," even though they are separate structures aboveground. On the plans, they are clearly marked. Main House. Guest House (actually Servant's House) and Pool House.

If this enormous cellar, approximately 15,700 square feet in size is to be considered part of the house so as to make the three sep-very carefully and his architect, Sawyer/Berson of Manhattan (who did the Seinfeld "renovation" of the Billy Joel house in East Hampton) was hired to design the project. Sugarman told his architect he liked the layout of what was there — a main house, a guest house and a pool house which had been built preceding zoning — and he wanted them to find some way for him to tear the old buildings down but build new ones there, a main house, arate structures above as "one," the existence of this cellar also serves the purpose — if you wanted to buy that it was a cellar — of satisfying the letter of two other laws.

The first law, a Federal Emergency Management (FEMA) ordinance, says you cannot build hard structures, such as reinforced concrete walls, in the dunes to block the sea. But if this is a "cellar," then it is legal. Even though it goes virtually the entire width of the property at a height of almost 10 feet, which by any other definition would be a sea wall or in this case TWO sea walls, attached by a floor and sidewalls, or even a coffer dam large enough in which to build a submarine. If it is a "cellar," it is not any of those things.

The second law, Village Ordinance involves the number of allowable square feet for a private home. If more than 50% of what might be a first floor is underground, then it is not a first floor at all. It is a cellar and it doesn't count. And yes, it is a cellar because they can shove sand up against it and, lo and behold, it is 50% underground. Under those circumstances, the legal square footage for all three structures is 12,000 square feet if just one floor. The three structures proposed totaled approximately 11,500 square feet, so they fit. But then they sit on this 15,000+ square foot cellar. Total them together and you get a true idea of the size of this mammoth structure, shoved onto a site that is really just two usable acres, since the front two and a half acres are unusable oceanfront dunes.

Also consider the height of the structure, limited for residences in the village to 35 feet. The plan shows that the house rises 34' 6" from grade to roof. So it is legal. But from the road, it all rises to 42 feet, its flat roofs also defining a space also longer than a football field, visible from miles away.

Another FEMA environmental rule actually helped Mr. Sugarman and his architects make this giant house rise this high. Because the project is on a sand dune with pre-existing zoning, the rule is that if you knock down an old building and build a new one, you have to be — in a sand dune — above the "flood plain." And the flood plain is 12 feet above sea level. So the cellar sits high up above sea level and road level — the builders actually had to build a huge concrete retaining wall on the eastern property line, to hold in the big pile of sand it sits on so it won't spill down onto the neighbor's property. And then the house goes up two stories beyond that.

How the Architectural Review Board could have let this thing through, well, in February 2003, they did. One cringes at this.

The vote was 4 in favor and 1 against. Arnold Paster was the presenter of the decision and wrote the majority view. The one against was Cathie Bellows, and the report approving this project acknowledges her dissent.

"C. Bellows stated this building is not appropriate. The size is not appropriate.....She stated that she is very opposed to this project; this is in the Historic District and it is totally inappropriate in size, style and scale."

And so the bulldozers from the well-known Southampton construction firm of Andreassen & Bulgin came in, knocked down the old houses, dug out the old swimming pool and tennis court, cleared the land of all beach grass and other living things, and then, didn't even have to dig much of a hole. The nearly ten foot tall reinforced concrete walls would be built above the road level with the sand pushed up against them halfway up and be called "the cellar."

And then the two story house, actually three separate houses, would be built on top of that. This home, including the cellar, at more than 26,000 square feet of floor space, is far beyond the legal size of a home in the Village of Southampton. But you don't have to consider the cellar.

I am not saying anybody has violated the law here. But I still don't like it. Architectural

Lick Happy

Is That a Good Thing or a Bad Thing? Only the Dog Knows For Sure

By Dan Rattiner

I have two furry dogs, one a wheaten terrier, who weighs about forty pounds. The other is a bichon frise, who weighs about fifteen pounds. I often take one of the dogs to work. They like hanging around me. I like hanging around them.

The funny thing is, I see this in human terms. I have two pals. And they see it in human terms. They have a pal. I do not buy into the theory that all it is for them is that I'm the one who feeds them, as some people, insensitive to the truth, have said.

But then the other day, a friend told me she had to give away one of her dogs. Before the giveaway, she had three. The youngest one, a male, who was now just a year old, had tried to lick one of the older ones in the face. A fight ensued and they had to be separated. A trainer told them that being licked in the face by another dog is considered an insult in the dog world. The young dog, who had a reputation as a fighter, was challenging the lead dog in the house. It wasn't going to work out.

I didn't think much of this story at the time, until that night, me and the little dog came home from work and, after the dog who stayed behind enjoyed welcoming us, I sat down on the sofa and they both jumped up and as they always do began licking me.

I like being licked in the face. Kisses. "Oh, I love you, too," I told them as I scratched them behind the ears. You can do that when there are no other humans around.

So now I'm suspicious. Was I being played for a chump?

"Hey, there he is, let's go over and show him who's boss and lick him in the face. He'll feed us.

Never fails."

Well, I was suspicious for about a day. But I have totally rejected this idea. Not happening. These are kisses. And there was an article in the paper the other day about a study which has found that babies are healthier if they are raised with dogs around. Dog slobber, apparently, gives babies stronger immune systems.

I then observed the following behavior. I had been at work with the smaller of my two dogs, and when I came home and after all the kisses and pats and so forth and so on, we settled down and the two dogs went their own ways for awhile. But then the smaller dog wanted to play with the larger dog. He came over and hunkered down, face to face, with the larger dog, who was sleeping, barked at him and wagged his tail. Then he leaned forward and licked the larger

LAWSUIT: SHINNECOCKS CLAIM SHINNECOCK

By Dan Rattiner

For five years, the Shinnecock Indian Tribe in Southampton had an arrangement with a California developer designed to result in the tribe getting a gambling casino built on some tribe owned land in Hampton Bays. That effort seemed to end in failure last year, when the developer Ivy K. Ong, apparently ran through the millions of dollars he had set aside to fight in court to achieve this. Ong put his stake up for sale. Then he left town and has not been heard of since.

Now the Shinnecock Indian Tribe has teamed up with another California man, this time a Sacramento lawyer named John Peebles, to try to get compensation for a land deal that took place in 1859, where the local settlers apparently swindled the Indians out of 3,600 acres that had been leased to them. In the lawsuit that was filed in Federal court last Monday, the Shinnecocks are demanding the return of the land to them, plus several billion dollars in damages.

The property in question today includes Southampton College, the National Golf Course and the Shinnecock Golf Links (which the Indians built for the white men in 1895) together with all other property from the western outskirts of downtown Southampton to the Shinnecock Canal, a distance of about four miles. This includes The Southampton Golf Club, the Southampton Driving Range, all the stores along County Road 39 from Tuckahoe Road to the Lobster Inn — including P. C. Richards, Suburban Auto Body and Off Track Betting. In the south, along Hill Street and 27A, it includes all the motels and restaurants along the northern shore of Shinnecock Bay and the Southampton College Marine Science Center.

The claim for the property really goes back to dog in the face. The larger dog instantly growled, got up and tried to walk away. The little dog did it again and playing ensued. Mouths wide, rolling around, fake bites and so forth. I thought it was so cute.

I now think we have no idea about dogs, and we just make it all up. I also think we do that with a lot of other animals.

The other night, I was talking to a woman who lives in one of those areas on the East End which has been plagued by an overabundance of deer. They eat everything. Gardens, landscaping, flowers, bushes. Drive up route 114 through North Haven toward the ferry and you will see that they have gnawed all the leaves and branches on the trees up to about as high as a deer can reach, which is pretty high. There is a herd on that little peninsula, which has been estimated to be a total of about 600 animals.

"I hate them," this woman said. "I hate these eight foot fences we build, I hate when they get in anyway. I hate that we get Lyme disease from them. If these deer were giant spiders this size, we'd know exactly what to do with them."

It was not hard to imagine 600 giant spiders stalking through North Haven. What a terrifying idea. We'd have the army out there with flame throwers.

But deer are just so cute and they bat their big brown eyes. How could anybody even THINK of harming one of them?

We haven't got a clue what goes on with animals. All we know about them is what we make up about them in our heads. But I don't care. •

Review Boards, in my opinion, should not be made up of people in the real estate and construction business, and these boards should have the guts to turn things down when they meet the letter of the law but not the spirit of the law. I can tell you that East Hampton Village, which has demonstrated far more courage when confronted with such nonsense, would never have let this through. Sue us, they would have said. And negotiations would have begun and something agreeable to all would have resulted.

In closing, I should say that in the end, when all the slate and marble is installed (on much of the roof of the cellar,) when the two reflecting pools are built in addition to the swimming pool, and Reed Hildebrand Landscaping does their work, the entire project, including the Berlin Wall, will be masked in vegetation and hedgerows and won't stick out like a sore thumb which it does now while in construction. But it will always rise up too high — beyond what the Village intended — and it will always block all visual access to the sea from the road for the length of a football field — and it will always be a continuing insult to the dunes, the environment and the sea — and it will always be alien to what is commonly treasured as "Hamptons" architecture.

And that's the story. •

when about thirty white men and women landed at Conscience Point in North Sea in 1640 after rowing across Long Island Sound from Connecticut. The Shinnecoeks, numbering about 500 people, welcomed the new settlers, and showed them how to grow corn, catch whales, raise turkeys and other things. They also had, early on, led them inland, to a woods down near where Southampton Hospital is today — the Hospital is safe from this lawsuit — and showed them how to build simple shelters to get them through the first cold winter.

In the late 1600s, the English settlers bought all of the property east of the Canal from the Indians for a few coats, beads, shillings, some whiskey and guns. It is likely the Indians did not know what they were actually doing in selling the land. First of all, they had no understanding of buying and selling. Second of all, they could not read. Their chiefs signed away all the land with an X.

Be that as it may, the Indian claim really relates to a lease that was signed in 1703. The tribe, not understanding what they had done, continued to live in the midst of the white men in Southampton, doing menial jobs and otherwise observing their ancient tribal traditions in the woods outside of town. Because they came and went wherever they wanted to go, ignoring the fact that the whites believed the Shinnecoeks had sold the property, the English settlers decided to make a lease with the Shinnecoeks to keep them in their own space. This lease, again without much clear understanding on the part of the Indians, gave them the rights for 1,000 years to the land between a line drawn north to south, from bay to bay,

Awakening Ends

A Water Mill Mansion, Awakened, Now Goes Back to Sleep

By Dan Rattiner

I was at a fundraiser this past Saturday night. It was held under a glittering white tent on a broad lawn, the water of Mecox Bay sparkling under the stars at the edge of the property, the valet car parkers in whites at the entrance. Five hundred yards away, a red carpet lined with candles in sandbags wound its way between some out buildings to a tent filled with silent auction offerings, two bars, a raw bar, waitresses with silver trays of hors d'oeuvres walking around amongst the hundreds of guests — many of whom were in tuxedos — and then to an adjacent second and larger tent which had been made into a dining room with buffet tables, one hundred round tables for eight, a dance floor and band and enough red roses all around to fill a greenhouse. The goal of the party was to raise more than a quarter of a million dollars for the American Heart Association.

But all I could think about was a movie I saw a dozen years ago. Called Awakenings, it was adapted from a true story of twenty people who hadn't spoken or communicated with anyone in a quarter of a century. Suffering from some serious malady, they were now mute, semi-conscious and virtually immobile. Frozen like statues, they were cared for by nurses and doctors at a hospital, where, at the beginning of the movie, one of them comes up with a medicine that will make them well.

The people are given the medicine, and, one by one, they wake up as if from a long sleep. They discover one another — oh, how are you

Unfortunately, it turns out the effects of the medicine are short lived. The patients remain awake for several weeks, but then one by one, they return to their catatonic states. And the movie ends where it began, with the patients standing around like statues, being fed and attended to by teams of medical people. For awhile, however, they had come to life.

It's a sad movie in a way, all about life, and I thought of it because many people were talking about the fact that this will probably be the last glittering fundraiser to be held on the grounds of this Villa Maria mansion in Water Mill. It is being sold for $25 million, with the new buyer to be announced next week. And it will become the private home it was originally built to be — available for family and friends of the owners. Its opening to the public would have lasted a wonderful fifteen years.

Villa Maria, a twenty-three-bedroom waterfront estate on the south side of Montauk Highway as you enter Water Mill, was a private estate, off limits to the general public, for more than a century. But then, for those brief fifteen years, it became a place where you could attend lectures, go to classes, attend business meetings, conventions, prayer sessions and educational courses.

No one is regretting the change. People unit is so good to see you — and they make friends with the nurses and doctors and begin slowly to undergo physical therapy to loosen up the muscles that have lain so dormant over all the years.

derstand it really was just a private home and so it will return to being a private home. It's coming alive was just a moment in time.

The history of this magnificent home, as beautiful as any you are liable to see from a public street in the Hamptons, begins in 1883, when two business partners from Manhattan bought eight acres of land on Mecox Bay for the purpose of building a summer mansion for their families.

It was unusual for two wealthy men to share a home, and it is unknown if they alternated vacations there or came out with their families together. The men were named Marshall Ayers and Josiah Lombard, and it has long been believed that their business dealings were in retailoring, and that they owned department stores.

Recently, however, I came upon information that suggests otherwise. Eleven years before they built their summer home, they were central to a national event known as the Great Oil War of 1872. In that year, a group of men tried to corner the market on oil. Hiding their identities from some of the major players in the oil industry, they approached the railroads as a newly formed corporation — the South Improvement Company — and offered to sell them oil at a price below that which upstanding oil firms had been selling it to them for. The railroad men bought into this. And a huge battle started.

"Mr. Josiah Lombard, of the New York refining firm of Ayers, Lombard and Company, was buying oil for his company at Oil City," reads a long ago history of the Standard Oil Company. "Their refinery was running about 12,000 a month. On the 19th of February, the rate from Oil City to Buffalo, which had been forty cents a barrel, was raised to sixty-five cents, and a few days later the rate from Warren to New York was raised from eighty-seven cents to $2.14. Mr. Lombard was not aware of this change until his house in New York reported to him that the bills for freight were so heavy that they could not afford to ship and wanted to know what was the matter."

Within the month, the entire American oil producing industry, drillers, refiners, pumpers and brokers, went on strike and with the help of the crusading newspaper editor of the Oil City (Pennsylvania) Derrick broke open this group to reveal them as the bunch of crooks they were. They were tried, convicted and sent to jail and everything returned to normal. Eleven years later, Lombard and Ayres started construction on their summer house.

The owners of this house over the next forty years were well known rich men (and women) from New York City. Many large mansions in and around New York have histories such as this. Ayres and Lombard sold their estate to a prominent Manhattan urologist, Dr. Edward L. Keyes, who expanded the mansion even further, and lived in it until 1899, when he sold it to Brooklyn shipbuilder Edward Phinley Morse. Morse kept it until 1929, when he sold it to a successful movie actress by the name of Irene Coleman. Two years later, as the great depression hit, Ms. Coleman was forced to sell the property at a loss to its current owners, the Order of St. Dominic of Hicksville.

An odd bit of history is that when the townspeople learned the property had been sold to the Order, they went to see the nuns on the estate, and told them what they already knew, which was that the estate was on a 16-acre parcel of land. What the nuns did not know was that this final 8 acres bought later (by one of the industrialists) included the town green with the great Water Mill windmill on it. Would the order be willing to part with the Windmill and perhaps the 1 1/2 acres of triangle upon which it sat so the townspeople could have a hamlet green? The nuns readily agreed, selling the mill and the triangle for $1 to the Water Mill Village Improvement Society, but with the codicil that if the Society ever stopped using it as a green, it would revert back to them. The Society agreed to this, and that codicil is in force today.

The Order of St. Dominic had purchased the place to turn it into a college for women. But when the priests at church headquarters reviewed the matter, they decided that eastern Long Island was just too far away for such a project, and so built their college in Rockville Center (Molloy College) while lowering their sights out east. The Water Mill mansion would become a "juniorate" for young women aspiring to join the Order.

The students for this "juniorate" were al-

Lifeguard Tales

Memories of Rescues, Warnings, Sea Pusses, Deer and Cormorants

By R. B. Stuart

Being a lifeguard isn't as peachy as it looked on "Bay Watch." Lifeguards go through a rigorous training from March until June, beginning in still water using the East Hampton pool. "They start out by swimming eight laps and they're dying, then by the end (of the training) they're doing 30," said senior lifeguard Vanessa Edwards. And those that are interested in becoming ocean lifeguards go through the challenging ocean tests.

With the flux in the current weather, the lifeguards in ocean training are going from 56-degree water wearing full wet suits to bathing suits and back again, said John Regan Sr. the Coordinator of Lifeguard Training in East Hampton, an ocean lifeguard for 50 years. He had nine children and all became lifeguards. Only John Jr. stayed with it and became Chief of Lifeguards in East Hampton. Regan Sr., now in his 70s and trains the new generation who will patrol the oceans for numskulls like us who will go out a bit too deep and get caught in a rip tide.

After all these years Regan is still passionate and very concerned about lifeguarding. He commented on the recent deer rescue at Maidstone Club in East Hampton. "Deer are a lot like a lost child. They'll walk in one direction forever. They were probably chased by dogs into the water and were trying to swim to the other side, except there is no other side to the ocean. If they weren't rescued they would have died. There are a lot of crazy things and sad things about lifeguarding. But they have to get out there and rescue. Life guards can't walk around in goggles and wet suits." Advising when you see people in the ocean in beaches and pools, but we can educate the public," Ryan said. Continuing, "When you dive into a wave hold your arms out and put your hands together, your hands will protect your head from hitting the bottom," he ended.

John Ryan Jr. has been the Chief Lifeguard for the town of East Hampton for 12 years. In his 25 years of lifeguarding, one rescue stood out to him the most. "We rescued a mentally handicapped guy in Montauk. He had taken the train there, undressed, and that's when we saw him entering the water wearing only his underwear and a watch. When we went after him he fought us the whole way. Like a wrestling match until the police came."

Then there was the time he found himself caught in a wild duck chase with black Cormorants.

There was an injured Cormorant in Maidstone Bay. One of the bay guards went to the inlet to look for the duck. "I called the lifeguard on the radio but kept losing her. She swam across the inlet to help this bird that would become food out there. When I finally got to the bay guard she had brought it in. It couldn't even hold its head up. That thing was done, it was on its last leg. I found a box and took it to the vet. They took it into the trouble to call 911, don't go in the water to rescue them yourself. Once you get out beyond your waist, you're out of control, the water takes over.

"When we're faced with a drowning victim they're going to grab at you and take you under — always go out with a piece of equipment, boogie boards, anything you can give the victim. You cannot make the rescue alone in ocean water. We cannot protect all of the backroom and it died."

Vanessa Edwards has watched the shores of Amagansett to Montauk to Maidstone for the past nine years. "We try to instill preventative lifeguarding. Having high life guard stands gives us a better vantage point to see the water. Rip Currents or Sea Pusses, which newspapers call rip tides (incorrectly), have nothing to do with the moon, and have a distinctive color and shape to them only seen from the high stands. When you're in water above your waist the water is in control, below your waist, like at your knee, you're able to get out of it, but people need to respect the water. And if you're ever in a rip current, swim parallel to the shore. When you swim with the sweep, you will get out of it, the waves will help you get to the shore."

The majority of Edwards' rescues have been with people not wearing a life vest in kayaks or blow-up boats. An ocean kayak is unsinkable, but the kind of kayak you sit in like a canoe sinks. "People don't want to wear life jackets because they're cumbersome and hot.....but they'll save your life," Edwards adds.

The very first day she was on duty, in the first hour, several kayaks came from Lions Head in Springs to Sammy's Beach. "I noticed a red one out there and put on my binoculars but I didn't see anyone in it," Edwards said. "Then I ran down the beach screaming, whistling and yelling as I swam out to the kayak. It was tipped over and I finally saw a woman on the other side of it holding on. The zipper was broken on the life vest she was wearing, so it was up around her armpits. I flipped the kayak over but she couldn't climb back up into it, so I did. She hung on to the back and kicked as I paddled back to shore."

The woman was so embarrassed. She thanked her profusely and left only to come back two hours later with a big bag of chocolate chip cookies for both lifeguards. "During my nine years, I had three other rescues and I was fortunate to have people nearby with boats to go out and get them," Edwards concluded.

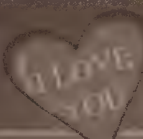

Rob Lambert, Assistant Chief Lifeguard of nine years primarily covering the area of Montauk, remembers well a mega save from last Labor Day during hurricane swells. A call came in that a family of three was frolicking in the hurricane surf of the unguarded area of Ditch Plains in Montauk. Lambert continued, "A father, mother and daughter were being pulled out by an undertow. The rescue was a challenge because the family was not the most physically fit; their weight made it difficult to bring in all three at once."

A lifeguard wearing a harness was sent out with a bucket and a line to pull them in. Able to rescue the mother and daughter first, he hung onto one as the other held onto the line and were pulled in. The father hung onto a surfer's surfboard and had heavily labored breathing from all the strain. When he was finally brought to shore, he lay on the surfboard and had an asthma attack.

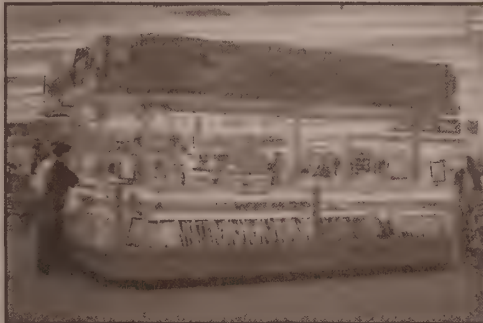

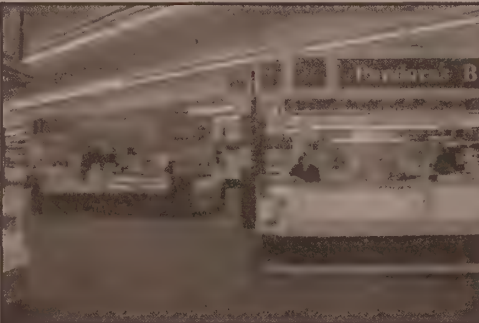

"The EMTs were right there and immediately gave him oxygen," Lambert said. Adding, "There is a serious situation at Nicks Beach in Montauk on S. Edison Ave. In 2003, the first day the lifeguard stand opened, there were 12 saves and before that there were two drownings," he continued. "It is a heavily occupied tourist beach and they are uneducated, unlike the locals who grew up here, to the dangers of the ocean. It is a very important beach with a lot of hotel guests and we need to have a permanent comfort station there. People need to know that they have to swim in the lifeguarded perimeters, that's where it is safer."

Lifeguards are there so that we can have fun, safely, not to keep us from having fun. The powerful ocean water can turn a day at the beach into an unnecessary tragedy. We are a mere droplet in the body of that magnificent sea. And if anyone wants to see how they do it, Lambert has invited anyone who wants to come down and watch the first ocean testing of 20 lifeguard candidates. "We love having spectators," Lambert said. It will be on Saturday, June 18 at 9:30 am at Indian Wells Beach in Amagansett.

Decisions To Be Made for Abandoned Watch Case Factory

By David Lion Rattiner

A giant rotting building is standing in the center of Sag Harbor, begging to be used for something. It is the old Bulova Watchcase Factory, which has not been used since 1981. Finally in the news, it is being talked about. Built in 1881, it reminds the people of the area what Sag Harbor used to be: a whaling town, a factory town, a blue-collar town. Now, of course, things have changed. There is hustle and bustle in the summer. But like an old man sticking to his ways, the factory simply refuses to be anything else but an old factory. And two months ago, a whole wall of brick on the third floor collapsed to the ground, revealing the hollow insides. Hello.

So what is the deal with the old watch case factory? Who owns it? Why isn't being taken care of? Why is it falling apart? All of these questions would make sense if left unanswered in an abandoned factory town in the middle of the country. But Sag Harbor is now a tourist giant. Real Estate is expensive, yachtsmen and fine restaurants are found on the streets, even celebrities live there. Sag Harbor is a great place to be. One would think that such a huge piece of property in the middle of Sag Harbor would be used for business or as a museum, or at the very least, taken care of by somebody. But for the past twenty-two years, all you have been able to do is watch it rot away.

The history of the building is very interesting. An earlier factory on the site was built in 1850 when it was used as a cotton mill. The building caught fire, however, and burned to the ground in 1879. Two years later, a man by the name of Joseph Fahys decided that the land would make a good place to build a watchcase factory. And so the factory was built eagerly by Sag Harbor, who welcomed the new jobs and business to the town. It was a modern factory for its time, complete with a gym and a recreation room. Gold was melted down and transformed into elegant watchcases. Sag

PUBLISHERS CAN HELP MAKE A BEAUTIFUL SOUTHAMPTON

By Dan Rattiner

A group of downtown Southampton merchants met at Le Chef on Job's Lane early the other morning to discuss, among other things, a problem that they and the Village have been wrestling with for the past two or three summers — namely the increasing glut of free publications that are distributed in town every week.

This is within the context of a rather recent and delightful development in that town. Activity in the evening, including strolling and window shopping, is on the rise. This activity, while in place in many other local communities in recent years, had never come to Southampton. But now, it has, largely, many believe, because of the arrival of the Multi-Plex theatre on Hill Street, and the revival of that area, thanks to developer George Semerjian.

The merchants have proposed, and the Village has agreed, to allow outdoor cafes to be open on the sidewalks in the summertime. Now many merchants in Southampton are staying open until 9 or 10 p.m. Check it out.

In any case, the free newspapers and magazines have to play a part in this. They have to be well kept and neat. And they have to be in whatever stores want them. Not wherever the various publishers of them want to throw them.

Personally, this situation is very important to me, not just because I publish Dan's Papers, but because I actually founded this means of distribution many years ago. We have a slogan on the masthead. "Dan's Papers is the First Free Resort Newspaper in America." And it's never been challenged.

In 1960, in Montauk, I got the idea to distribute stacks of newspapers into the lobbies of all the motels in that town. I sold advertising to the restaurants and merchants in the belief

Harbör became a classic American factory town with a noon whistle and workers clocking in, as the watchcases were made and the economy grew slowly stronger, in recovery from the collapse of the earlier whaling industry.

Many strong, local family names are tied to the factory such as Fahys, Cook, Topping, Halsey and others. The factory remained in healthy operation until 1931 when the business failed due to foreign competition. It was at this time that Arde Bulova, the chairman of the Fahys Company, purchased the building to make way for the Bulova Watch Company.

The Bulova Watch Company is what the building is best known for because of the popularity of the watches. The factory remained a Bulova Watch Company until 1975, when once again, the building failed. Then it wasn't until 1992 when a man by the name of Pat Malloy got the idea to turn the factory into condominiums. The project was suddenly halted, however, when environmental toxic waste was found inside the factory. The building was then declared a superfund site. Once again, the rooms remained barren.

So now, here we are, in 2005, and the building is still empty. Not only is it empty, but it is falling apart and has the mayor of Sag Harbor, Ed Deyermond, a little nervous. Since the upper wall on the third floor of the building fell to the sidewalk, there has been much talk about tearing the whole thing down and rebuilding it from scratch. This has some in Sag Harbor upset because the building has such incredible historic value. They don't want the building to be torn down; however, it does seem to be an option worth considering due to the structural damage that is threatening the public, and the cost of restoring it.

A month ago, Dunn Engineering was hired to survey the damage and it has been determined that "it would be more cost effective to tear it down." However, they also said in a letter to the village that there were "no hazardous or unsafe structural conditions observable that would necessitate demolition of the entire structure." In other words, they don't really recommend one thing or the other. Tearing it down is okay, leaving it is okay, fixing it up is okay.

There are a million things that the old factory could be used for once the toxins are removed. It could be turned into a luxury hotel, it could be turned into affordable apartments, it could be turned into a watch museum, a shopping mall. It could be anything. The problem seems to be that nobody can make a decision on what to do with it. One way or another, it will have to get repaired and it will have to be used for something. Hopefully, it won't take another twenty-two years.

Lola

Southampton Friends Offer Up Clothing Line at Fashion Show

By Avery Andon

Car horns and jovial shouts filled the air as I was ushered past the mob scene surrounding Star Room's entrance on Saturday night. Well-dressed club goers eager to see and be seen at the Lola Couture Fashion Show knocked back cocktails while some of the sexiest girls the Hamptons have to offer strutted their stuff down the V.I.P. stairs, sporting Lola's new line of summer apparel.

Lola Couture isn't a cookie-cutter clothing label. It is a concept, a movement. The five young founding members of the company befriended each other at the former skate park, Lola Prentice, on Windmill Lane in Southampton in the mid-nineties, and have considered each other family ever since.

After repeated reports of mischief and mayhem, Southampton Town closed the skate park in 1998, but the Lola "crew" only became closer and as time passed and the ramps and rails at Lola Prentice were turned into a pile of scrap, the name "Lola" became a symbol of the rebellious lifestyle they chose to lead.

It seemed to them there was a lack in street credible clothing companies representing the east coast skate-boarding scene. The Southampton natives created Lola Couture to fill the void with a unique collection of trendy shirts and skate board decks. Emmitt Shyne, the mastermind behind many of the Lola designs, explained, "We're not a bunch of forty year olds sitting in a cubicle trying to figure out what kids these days want to wear. We are kids these days, making stuff that we want to wear!"

and appreciate that. It's about us saying what's on our minds through the clothes we make. Everyone has a voice; it's a question as to whether or not they choose to use it. Lola is our voice."

The first model to step down the stairs was Kim Matulova, a gorgeous brunette actress who grew up in Bridgehampton and has had roles in several movies including the film Black and White. People pushed and shoved to get better positions as Kim showed off a skirt made from one of the new Lola t-shirts. Her slender figure and distinctively seductive eyes left so little to the imagination that several guys actually photographed her with their camera phones.

Music for the event was taken care of by DJ Vibe, another Hamptonite who has performed in clubs everywhere from Manhattan to Paris. Hip-hop played in the background as Amanda Shyne graced the runway with her beauty, wearing another revealing skirt fashioned from a cut up Lola shirt. Mr. Shyne's younger sister displayed the glamorous presence of an upcoming Hollywood starlet, flashing an alluring smile that would have made Marilyn Monroe jealous.

All of a sudden they are generating hype comparable to major clothing labels that have been in business for years.

Upon entering the Star Room in Wainscott, I was greeted by James Cruickshank, one of the company's founders. Wearing a pin-striped suit and Velcro moon boots, the entrepreneurial young man moved happily around the club, shaking hands and exchanging laughs with everyone in the crowd. James describes the company as, "Friends for fashion." Apparently it's not just the five original members pushing for Lola anymore. "Everyone we grew up with is doing what they can to help us. People see that we're using this as a forum for expression

Lola Couture has increased its distribution, sales and promotion. Their website "www.LolaSkateBoards.com" is receiving over 10,000 hits a month and the shirts are selling out within days of being restocked at local surf shops, boutiques in Manhattan and the hip new East Hampton clothing store Blue & Cream. Jeff Goldstein, the notable Hamptons personality and co-owner of Blue & Cream, is a huge Lola supporter and is thrilled to be involved with "one of the most creative companies out; they're not following a protocol like so many other designers. It's amazing the progress they've made over the last twelve months. All of a sudden they are generating hype comparable to major clothing labels that have been in business for years."

The fashion show was promoted by the powerhouse P.R. partners Jonathon Chebin and Lizzie Grubman, who haven't had any trouble making the Star Room one of the Hamptons most popular nightclubs for a second consecutive year. Their magic seemed to be in full effect on Saturday, attracting a huge Lola, clad crowd to the promotional event.

James and his partners are in the process of starting the Lola Foundation, a non-profit organization that will raise money for troubled and underachieving youths. In Mr. Cruickshank's words, "A lot of kids could do well in school, but don't see the bigger picture and get caught up. We want to help get them back on track by providing counseling and support. You don't need to be a drug addict or criminal to need help; some kids just require an extra push."

The group of creative young men that started Lola Couture has truly come full circle, from causing trouble at a skate park to harnessing their creative energies into a successful upstart company and a charitable program for misled teenagers.

that, if the newspaper was friendly and attractive, the people staying in the motels, finding something that was delivered to them that was unique — a newspaper — would read it from cover to cover. They did. And for the second issue, I began delivering it to every single store in that town. It was welcomed everywhere.

It never occurred to me that some day the Supreme Court would rule that free newspapers would also have the right to disseminate the news on the public streets and cities in this country. But around 1980, they did exactly that, and from that point on, rows of street boxes appeared on street corners all over the country with newspapers in them. In fact, today, Dan's Papers has about 40 street boxes on the Upper East Side of New York and you can pick us up there along with the Village Voice, Avenue, Our Town and the New York Observer. I need no license or permission to do this.

Meanwhile, a unique and, at the time quite wonderful situation developed in the Hamptons and on the North Fork. As Dan's Papers expanded into those areas in the 1970s and early 1980s, it was welcomed into the stores with such enthusiasm that there was simply no need to put any street boxes onto the street corners. One or two other publications appeared on the scene to compete with us, and they were welcomed, too. The result was that anywhere you went in America, to Miami Beach, to Santa Fe, to Charleston, to Key West, to Cape Cod, to anywhere, there were street boxes. In the Hamptons and North Fork there were no street boxes. There still aren't any.

In a way, though, the merchants have been hoisted onto their own hospitality. It has become a way of life here. And so a problem has developed. Whenever any Tom, Dick or Harry decides to publish a guide or manual or leaflet or anything else, they feel free to just go into the stores and drop them off. And the merchants, because of this long tradition, accept them.

Now it is a problem. And I think the merchants have to step up to the plate and take responsibility for this activity. They have to make a decision. Does it go on? Does it not go on? They seem to feel that it is either one or the other, but it isn't. It is perfectly okay — no,

There's a thin line between fairy tale and soap opera, and Tommy Mottola knows it. His life has been lived publicly and, like it or not, he is a part of the musical landscape. Besides being the former head of Sony Music and now hard at work creating his own empire through a new venture with Universal, Mottola has made indelible marks on the pop psyche. Ex-wife Mariah Carey reportedly based her song "Butterfly" — in which she says she must spread her wings and fly (which we are sure is a very deep metaphor all on its own) — on her relationship with Mottola; he's been name-checked by Wyclef Jean in the Fugees song "How Many Mics" ("Street pressure, word to papa, I ain't going under/ One day I have a label and make deals with Tommy Mottola"); Michael Jackson drove through Times Square declaring him the devil, complete with a poster of then Sony Music head with devil horns drawn on his head; and he has run record labels with a flamboyance and notoriety perhaps matched only by fellow Hamptonite Sean Combs.

Tommy Mottola Music Industry Executive

The similarities between the Hip Hop impresario and musical Midas do not end with posh Hamptons digs: Both men have been linked to Jennifer Lopez, though one might guess that her name change to J. Lo was prompted by Diddy (formerly Daddy) and not Tommy. But make no mistake; Mottola is no stranger to pseudonyms.

As a young man he recorded two singles as a singer for Epic Records, as T.D. Valentine, and later, ran his management company under the name Don Tommy, a clear nod to his goodfella-neighborhood upbringing in the Bronx. He later renamed the company (with characteristic modesty) Champion Entertainment.

Born (on July 14, 1949) into, by all accounts, a traditional Italian family, which was both warm and musical, Tommy Mottola was set on a musical path early. His trumpet playing skill earned him a scholarship to a private school, but young Tommy reportedly courted trouble early on and enjoyed a few years at a military academy instead. Once there, he soon switched from trumpet to guitar, and was well known for his penchant for running away. His family made the move from the Bronx to nearby New Rochelle in Westchester County, the home to which Tommy returned after his stint at military school, only to earn the reputation of "baddest boy in New Rochelle."

After attending Hofstra University, early stabs at acting and singing careers led Tommy near the limelight, but not yet into it. In 1971, he converted to Judaism to marry first wife Lisa Clark, whose father, Sam, founded ABC records. Mottola's first taste of success in the record industry came around this time when he began managing a musical group calling itself Whole Oates. That duo, under the name

Hall and Oates, went on to become one of the best-selling musical acts of the decade.

By the mid-seventies, Mottola had made a name for himself as a manager, with a roster that included Carly Simon and John Mellencamp (who was known as Johnny Cougar at the time). In 1977 Mottola negotiated a production deal between his company, Champion and CBS Records. In 1987 he made the shift from artist management to record label bigwig when he became President of Columbia Records, then a division of CBS Records. A year later Sony bought out CBS's record division, setting the stage for Mottola to head the U.S. music division (with artists that included Bruce Springsteen, Michael Jackson and Bob Dylan) of one of the biggest entertainment conglomerates in the world.

Dance-pop sensation Brenda K. Starr, one of the many artists Mottola oversaw at the time, was very soon to be over shadowed by one of her backup singers — an eighteen-year-old from Long Island with a staggering five-octave vocal range. When Starr tried to pass the young Mariah Carey's demo tape to another record executive at a party, Mottola intercepted the cassette, which had no name or markings on it and no trace of where the voice on it had come from. Legend has it Mottola listened to the tape in the limo on the way home from the party and was so astounded by what he heard that he had the limo turn right back around to find the mystery girl. He rushed into the party with the glass slipper of a cassette, but had no luck. It took him a week to track down the singer, and by 1990 Mariah Carey's eponymous debut was on record store shelves. Mottola's instincts proved correct, and Carey went on to produce four number one singles and sell over eight million copies.

It didn't take long for Mottola and Carey to become linked romantically, and the pair was married in 1993 in a ceremony reportedly modeled on the royal wedding of Prince Charles and Diana. Carey wore a $25,000 Vera Wang wedding dress to the fairytale nuptials which were witnessed by a crowd of such diverse onlookers as Ozzy Osbourne, Barbra Streisand, Robert De Niro and Billy Joel. Mariah Carey, with Mottola watching over her career, became the biggest selling female artist of the nineties.

The happy ending didn't last forever, though, and in 1997, the royal-pop couple separated. A divorce followed in 1998. Raydar magazine reported that Mottola once joked that he had a priest perform an exorcism to rid his home of the presence of the breakdown-prone diva. The exorcism might not have worked in North Haven, because Mottola sold his first Hamptons home a year after the divorce, though the sale probably had more to do with protests from neighbors and members of the community over his 198-foot dock.

Even while Mottola experienced a rough patch in his personal life, his professional stock was rising. That same year saw him named Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sony Music Entertainment. He brought acts such as Destiny's Child, Jessica Simpson and Jennifer Lopez to Sony, nurturing their careers and setting them on the path to the multimedia stardom they all now enjoy. In 2000, Mottola found love again, this time with Mexican pop-star Thalía, to whom he is still happily married.

A few years later, in 2002, came the spectacle of Michael Jackson loudly protesting against Mottola and even accusing him of racism. Several notable black leaders, including (perhaps most notably) Al Sharpton, spoke out in Mottola's defense. At the time, Jackson's career was nearing the bottom of a long downward spiral for which he seemingly blamed everything but his own increasingly bizarre behavior. These days it might be considered a mark of character to be an enemy of Jackson's.

At the top of his game in 2003, Mottola left Sony to pursue the creation of his own entertainment company in partnership with Universal Music. He now runs Casablanca Records, the legendary label that produced hit records by the likes of The Four Tops, Donna Summer, Kiss and Parliament in the seventies, and has recently fired the first salvo of the next stage of his career. Newly under Mottola's command, the label had its first hit in years with the release of the actress Lindsay Lohan's record. Now if he can just get her to eat a sandwich once in a while.

roughly west of downtown Southampton to the Shinnecock Canal. For the next 160 years, that is what the Shinnecocks called home.

The lease for 1,000 years, to 2703, abruptly was brought to an end early, however, when the railroad barons wanted to lay track though Long Island to Montauk in 1859. This meant crossing the land the Shinnecocks had leased.

As the United States was now independent and there were roughly 35 states in the Union, one of them being New York, the legislators in Albany got together with the railroad men and came up with a plan to end the lease early in exchange for an outright giving of the southernmost 1200 acres of the leased land to the tribe. The tribe would own this 1200 acres in perpetuity. The tracks would pass on Town land to the north, across property that the Indians were giving up.

The tribe consisted of far fewer Indians in 1859 than it did in 1703. The reason was they had died off from the diseases the white men brought with them from Europe, or from other causes. In one particularly gruesome episode, 13 Shinnecock braves, practically the entire remaining young male population of the tribe, was hired one December to try to save the cargo still aboard the schooner Circassian, which had wrecked on the rocks at Mecox the week before. The Shinnecocks were rowed out from the beach to the shipwreck in the middle of a snowstorm, which worsened, and resulted in them freezing to death on the wreck. The tribe mourned. But it carried on.

To break this lease and arrange for the gift of the smaller parcel to the Shinnecocks, a petition had to be sent to Albany. Twenty-three Shinnecocks signed this petition, though almost half of them signed with an X. Other signatures came from children and people not members of the tribe. There were also, on the petition, signatures of people that were dead,

MONTAUK RUGBY FALLS IN CHAMPIONSHIP FINALS

By Joe Werkmeister

The Pacific Ocean hasn't been friendly waters for these Sharks. Far from the comforts of the Long Island shore, the Montauk Sharks rugby team took to San Diego Saturday, June 10, for the second time since 1998 for a national championship.

As in '98, the Sharks fell short, this time losing to Pearl City, which captured the Division III USA Rugby Championship. The 26-10 loss was Montauk's first of the season.

"It's been a great season," Sharks' coach and player Paul Cleary said. "Our guys deserve a lot of credit. It was great for them to get here."

The Sharks had their chances. After a slow start, Cleary said the team put together a 10-minute period of intense pressure on Pearl City. While the team fought and battled, keeping Pearl City on its heels, it failed to capitalize.

"That was the turning point," Cleary said. The Sharks couldn't score during that time and Cleary said right then he knew his team was in trouble.

After sustaining through the Sharks' run, Pearl City came back with two more scores, for a comfortable lead.

"We hadn't played a game in two weeks," Cleary said, adding that it might have had an effect on the team's slow start, which saw Pearl City jump out to a 14-0 lead. The Sharks scored a try, creeping to 14-5, but the momentum didn't carry.

Heading into the game, the Sharks aimed at implementing a specific defense that utilized their strength at tackling. It didn't work entirely as planned, as the team surrendered its second highest point total of the year. "That really works when everyone kind of buys into it," Cleary said. "Maybe we just hadn't done it long enough."

Cleary said Pearl City had large numbers of foreigners on the team, something he's trying to avoid. While he and several other Sharks are from other countries, he said they've been here for years and now consider themselves locals. As for Pearl City, he said, "They fly guys in from Australia. At this level, you don't expect that sort of stuff going on..... We'll benefit in the long run."

Regardless, he said it wasn't an excuse and they had to play whatever team came on the field. "We didn't get the bounce of the ball." After the game, disappointment filled the team more than anything.

"We were confident going out there," Cleary said. "I think we were disappointed we didn't play well..... I thought we were fairly evenly matched, but we just didn't get the breaks."

Despite the disappointment, the players still found time to enjoy the trip and reflect on what they had accomplished. After the game, they hung out in San Diego for the night, celebrating the season. "It was one game we lost, but we had a great year," Cleary said.

With the season complete, Cleary will turn his attention to recruiting. At this point last year, the program nearly folded as participation dwindled. But through stronger organization, the team, everyday guys who play out of a love for the game has thrived.

How many players the team will have next year is unclear this early, but Cleary said he just has to encourage guys to stick with it, and keep looking for new players. The Sharks will have at least one less player. That is Cleary. Saturday was his last game and now he'll stick to coaching.

also duplicate names. Within days after this petition was sent, there was a second petition, signed by most of the tribe, declaring the first petition a forgery. Albany ignored the second petition and created the deed for the 1200 acres that is now the Shinnecock Reservation in exchange for giving up the lease to the 3,600 acres of land.

It seems an odd thing that the Shinnecocks are claiming ownership and financial damages for having given up land they leased. They are essentially saying the lease should never have existed in the first place. But if it did exist, it was broken illegally and therefore the tribe is entitled to billions of dollars in damages. Since 1859, there's been trespassing, other people charging rent on this property, other people making commercial transactions, other people selling pieces of the property and so forth and so on.

At the present time, in addition to this new claim, there are billions of dollars in other claims against the State of New York by various tribes here. Suits have been filed by the Mohegans, the Oneidas, the Mohawks and several branches of the Cayugas. Indians have laid claim to about a quarter of a million acres of land in upstate New York. But none has resulted in an Indian victory, although a compromise is in the works for the State to hand over 12,000 acres of nearly vacant land in northern New York near Canada for a new reservation in exchange for the dropping of a suit.

Complicating matters is the fact that the Shinnecock Indians are not even a federally recognized tribe. Though it seems obvious to anyone, including this reporter, that they are a viable tribe with a long and honorable history — they are already recognized by the State of New York — the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs has failed to act one way or another on a petition by the tribe in 1978 to have themselves recognized. I know these things take time, but to table the matter for this long is to bring undue hardship to the tribe, which wants to continue as a separate Indian Nation.

Most public officials say that the filing of this lawsuit is really a disguise designed to speed up the process whereby the tribe could build and operate a gambling casino in Hampton Bays. Most local officials say if that is the case, it will have the opposite effect.

According to the Sacramento lawyer, this is just the first of two lawsuits the Shinnecocks will file. The second lawsuit, which he says will be filed next month, will lay claim to almost all of Southampton Town, from Eastport and Westhampton to Bridgehampton and almost all property in between.

As I own the land in Bridgehampton where the Dan's Papers office is located, I would like to ask the Shinnecocks to not include me in the "almost all" section. If I can stay free of their claim, and eventually hook up with East Hampton Town after Southampton goes belly up, I'd be more inclined to write nice things about the Shinnecocks, though I really can't promise them anything. Just a thought.

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

that is the wrong way of putting it — it is at their discretion what goes into their stores or not. They can accept publication A and not publication B. They can accept all publications or no publications. Many merchants at this meeting expressed the belief that it is a good thing for a resort area to have these publications in their stores. So they accept them. Others said they had no room for them. Others said they liked this one but not that one.

Once or twice a year, we send an intern with a clipboard to walk from store to store around all the downtowns. In every store they ask the same group of questions. Could I speak to whoever is in charge? Do you receive Dan's Papers? If you do, do you get enough, too many, or is it just right? If not, do you want to receive Dan's Papers? Where shall we put them?

This information is written down on a clipboard and transmitted to our delivery manager, Tom Swinimer, who accommodates everybody's wishes, or tries to. It is an imperfect art.

One complicating issue is that deliveries are not always possible during the daytime because of traffic and parking. And so some of our deliveries are done at night. A bundle of papers is left in front of the stores that want them and are brought inside in the morning. This, by the way, is nothing new. Many deliveries are left off that way. UPS, for example. The New York Times, for example. There are, in fact, laws against tampering with such material left off. It comes under the category of interfering with a commercial transaction.

But then there is also littering. Though the villages and towns are now required to allow the dissemination of news, they are not required to allow it if it interferes with the regular flow of traffic on the streets and sidewalks. Newspapers and magazines cannot be left off on street benches or curbs. They cannot fully block passageways or doorways. In terms of dropping publications off on private property, they are displayed however the merchant wants. On public property, the decision of whether something is littering, rather than a display of the dissemination of news, lies with the police. It is perfectly proper for a police department to call a publisher at three in the morning to say that his papers are littering a public area and please remove them. It has happened to me. And I have to deal with whoever dropped papers off this way. Putting newspapers out like this is obviously the wrong way to do it.

I urge everyone who wishes to distribute newspapers and magazines to find out who exactly wants them and who doesn't and then abide by what information they gather. Doing a store to store survey is one way of doing this.

The Southampton downtown Merchants Association and the Southampton Chamber of Commerce are going to post on their web site a list of all publications, publishers and their phone numbers so that merchants can call a publisher to let them know they got something they did not want.

From our clipboard survey, Dan's Papers has lists and lists of who is to receive our publication and how many they want. Two years ago, the Village of Southampton requested that we provide them this list and we refused. We did so because this is not information to share with the government. But we would be very willing to share this information with a Merchant organization such as a Chamber of Commerce that would know to respect the confidentiality of business information.

I write this article in the interests of keeping a neat and beautiful downtown for all to enjoy. I want everyone to be part of this effort. So one thing, I guess, is if you, the reader, come upon a newspaper or magazine crumpled up somewhere, pick it up and put it where it belongs or in the trash.

I remember twenty years ago there was big trouble in downtown Westhampton Beach. It was becoming popular with low lifes who had pretty much done in towns such as Bay Shore or Patchogue to the west. There were drunks wandering around in the middle of the night having wandered out of nightspots, there were bikers rattling through the streets.

The town's reaction to all of this was very interesting. They decided to absolutely festoon downtown with planters and hanging baskets of flowers. They were everywhere. And the bikers came in, went uh oh, turned around and thundered away. They have not been back. The flowers are still put up every summer all over everywhere in town today.

"Trailblazing"

By Dan Rattiner

It is only a short while since Floyd Patterson won back his heavyweight crown, and it seems nearly impossible for any newspaper to get away without writing something about it. Montauk, however, just isn't a world of boxing odds and traffic lights. It is rather a place where one comes to relax, fish, swim, ride and explore. Noticeably, it is the only place on the island where it is impossible to get a New York paper with the stock market closings until the following morning.

With this in mind, we will not cover the big fight. We will instead cover fishing records and sailing regattas. We will follow skindiving and beachbugging because we truly believe the attraction of Montauk is its natural beauty and removal from the "doings" of mankind.

You may notice that only about 35% of our available space is allotted to advertising. We are not an "ad sheet" and hope never to be. Although we are certainly not adverse to making money, our prime purpose is not financial gain. We prefer to think that we are working to make other people happier by helping them to know Montauk better.

In view of the unusual attraction to Montauk, we found it hardly surprising that many of our advertisers have come to love Montauk in much the same way as we do.

Some of them "went along" with us not because they necessarily saw any financial gain, but because they felt that this sort of publication could assist in conveying the pleasure of "going Montauk" to the uninitiates. The "what's-in-it-for-me" attitude, highly predominant elsewhere, seemed quite absent in this part of the world.

Now don't get us wrong. In reality, our advertisers are paying good money to support us, and as we know each of our patrons "personally" we sincerely hope that their faith in us can bring them financial returns. Undoubtedly, there are good things in life that are bought with money. We just think that a great many of the things that come free are very available in this God's Country.

Now go out and buy something.

We would publicly like to thank Mr. Richard Gilmartin, without whose help this publication would not be possible. This man has given us literally dozens of leads that have led to precisely the kind of stories we were looking for (see "Dunlap's Cove" in this issue). He has an amazing memory and a wonderful grasp of facts rare in any man.

We would also like to thank Mrs. Hansford of the East Hampton Public Library. Presently the librarian of the Pennypacker Room of the library, she has been instrumental in helping us find information determining the accuracy of many of the "tales" we have related in this publication. Incidentally, we have done our best to be as accurate as possible in all cases.

40 Days Ago In Dan's Papers May 6, 2005

By Dan Rattiner

I've been following the trial of Michael Jackson with considerable interest, just as everybody else has, including you, even if you won't admit it.

Except for one bit of testimony, where a security guard at Neverland testified he saw Jackson having a sex act with a boy ten years ago, I see nothing that would convict him. The boy, who is now 22, and whose mother also says it happened to him won't testify. So if you believe this security guard, you convict Jackson. If you do not believe this security guard, you don't convict Jackson.

Personally, I don't believe the security guard. I think it would be very likely that in over twenty years of Jackson being a public figure you'd come across somebody who worked for him who would tell a story like this for whatever reason.

And so I think it's rather sad. Michael Jackson is really on trial for what the general public considers bizarre behavior, and for what surely is bizarre behavior. It might be okay if this person was a sanitation worker living down the block. You'd just say okay, he had too much plastic surgery, he wears crazy clothes, he loves kids, built a great kid's amusement park in his backyard and he somehow changed his skin color and became a white man. So just keep this guy away from me, okay?

What IS inappropriate behavior, with other people's kids? Well, lots. But then if you invite them to your house and present yourself as a second daddy to them — most of these kids need daddies — you get to hug them, tousle their hair, even lick their heads. It's part of the job. Sleeping in the same bed? I did that with my own kids when they were little. We all have. I grant you that officially Michael Jackson is not a father to these unfortunate kids, but from his perspective, he is. Certainly he thinks he is. And he thinks this is a good thing. The testimony supports that.

One of the other things that has come out at this trial is, surprisingly, just how — beneath the posturing and the costumes — normal Michael Jackson is. Or insecure he is. I mean — he has a collection of girlie magazines? This guy can't find a girl?

I think Jackson will be acquitted. I think he will also be ruined. As long as there are people who want to believe what the gossips say about celebrities, there will be people who will not be able to stand just how publicly bizarre Jackson has chosen to be. He will always be Wacko Jacko and he will be convicted by the public, and just for that.

During colonial times here in the Hamptons, there was a woman by the name of Goody Garlicke who behaved outside of what was felt to be the norm. Nobody liked her. She told tales, was a gossip, was frightening to people. She got shunned by those in charge at that time, and then, when the daughter of Lion

Gardiner, the prominent leader of the town, took sick and died in her bed, Goody Garlicke was arrested and charged with being a witch.

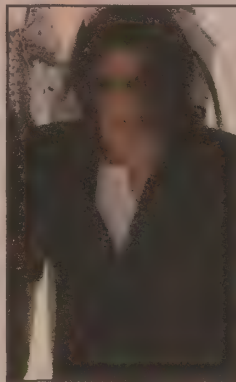

It was said she had cast a spell on Elizabeth and that is what killed her.

In the end, just before she was about to be put to death, Lion Gardiner intervened and said that she ought to be tried first. At the time, the Hamptons (and the towns on the North Fork) were part of the Connecticut colony, and so Goody Garlicke was taken to Hartford, Connecticut where she was tried and acquitted for lack of any evidence.

Garlicke returned to East Hampton, but the townspeople continued to shun her, so she and her husband sold their house and moved to Gardiner's Island, where under the wing of Mr. Gardiner, they worked as servants and farmland hands on that estate for the rest of their lives.

Anyway, if Jackson is convicted, what the heck sort of jail do you send him to? Can you even imagine it?

I do realize I am not at the trial and so there may be things perceived very differently there. Perhaps he did do something and perhaps he will be convicted. I mean, all I have to do is look how differently things turned out to be at the trial for O. J. Simpson from what I thought.

Life is better at The Bristol.

Change can be a tricky thing. But mom took to life at The Bristol with ease. She gets more done with each new day, and all with genuinely caring friends — residents and staff, alike. My greatest comfort comes in knowing mom isn't living alone. From the shopping trips, to the card games, to the fitness room, salon, cinema and more — she's again the social butterfly I remember so well growing up. Best of all: She's eating nutritious gourmet meals, the experienced staff adores her and her eyes are smiling once again. This is my mom. Active again. Life is better at The Bristol.

ASK GAEL

I'm in the Hamptons and need a reality check.

Crank down a few decibels with lunch at The Fish Farm. Get Marie Valenti to dish up her marvelous, peppery swordfish chili (a pint is perfect for two) and a couple of honest lobster rolls, barely mayo'd and sporting a big chunk of tail meat on top. Coleslaw is a must. Potato puree and just a dab of cream thicken the New England clam chowder and the lobster bisque. Marie cooks salmon farmed or wild, served with local corn. A crab cake on a bun is skinny but full of crabmeat. Husband Bob does the Key-lime tart. Thirty years ago, the Valentis came here to raise pan-size striped bass. "But no one was eating whole fish back then," she says. They switched to stocking local lobsters and fish, then started cooking eight years ago. Pick up to go, or settle at an umbrella'd picnic table overlooking the water. BYOB if you wish. You'll forget you ever heard of the Hamptons. Noon to 7:30.

Star Power

This past Friday evening, I arrived into East Hampton around 2 a.m.. I decided to unwind by reading "The Secret Language of Birthdays" book and look to the stars for some inspiration. Now, even if you don't believe in Astrology, this book is at least entertaining because it lists notable people who share the same birthday with you. I learned Ralph Lauren and Isaac Mizrahi were both born on my birth date, October 14th. There is a point to this story, please keep reading.

At God's Love We Deliver

Saturday evening I attended the "God's Love We Deliver" Mid-Summer Drinks Benefit, at the incredible Southampton estate of Don Burns and Greg Connors. The event successfully raised more than 250K benefiting GLWD. Ironically, the first person I spotted was GLWD host committee member, Isaac Mizrahi and he graciously agreed to let me interview him. Of course, I immediately told him how I just discovered that we share the same birth date. Isaac seemed amused by the small coincidence and exclaimed, "I'm very into astrology. I have more astrologists than you can shake a stick at.

My three favorites are Maria Napoli, Tony Leroy and Karen Thorn and all the other psychics I've been seeing for years. I base a lot of the decisions that I make in my daily life on my astrological readings." The stars have been very good to Mizrahi, who is a world-renowned designer with a line of clothing, house wares and accessories for Target, plus his Couture collection sold at Bergdorf's. Isaac remains modest, revealing, "I do all of that, but it's not really so much of an empire. Mizrahi may have made his mark, creating a successful brand name in the Fashion world, but his true desire is to star in his own television show. "I'm working on a television show, that's my favorite kind of pet project. Everybody wants to be a star, don't they?" Isaac had his first taste of the big screen, co-starring in the 1995 model cult favorite film, Unzipped. Isaac snarled, "That was a long time ago I did that film. I'm so old. That makes me so old." I try to reassure him, "you're only as old as you feel right?" Isaac replied, "Bullsh t, when you're over forty you're OLD. The thing about Unzipped, I was really fat when Unzipped was made.

Coralie Charriol, Dennis Paul

For one year of my life I was a little overweight and now, because of that movie, I'm referred to constantly as the newly svelte Isaac Mizrahi."

ready in place when the lawyers got around to finishing the deed transferring the title to the hamlet green. A big fuss was made over that transfer.

"The sisters and girls from the Villa Maria High School, in full uniform, sang the National Anthem after the American Flag was raised," a recent brochure created by the order reads. "A plaque recording this transaction was placed before the Wind Mill. It has since been lost in one of the hurricanes."

In the mid-1950s, the use of the building changed once again. The Juniorate was phased out. Now the building became a home for retired sisters.

It was in 1988, just 101 years after this beautiful estate was built, that the Order made a decision to open this beautiful mansion to the public for the first time. Only a few retired nuns lived on the property. They would continue to live there, but in addition, the estate would offer an outreach to the community. There would be a name change. Villa Maria would now be known as the Siena Spirituality Center at Villa Maria. There would be programs offered in spirituality, education and holistic living. I personally took a tour, courtesy of the order, through the property at that time. It was, and is, a stunning place. There is a grand drawing room with a stone fireplace and oak carved breakfront where servants could arrange seating for a grand dinner or for 50 people to attend a lecture or classic concert there. There was a magnificent library, a spectacular flying staircase, a back stargazing porch with an inlaid ceiling celebrating the moon and the stars. Upstairs there was a business conference room with state of the art electronics, including a videophone, a conference call phone, a board room table and a projection screen.

People will remember sitting on the lawn on blankets, listening to a concert out of doors. Ronan Tynan, the Irish Tenor, performed there. Orchestras performed there. Inside there were Bible retreats, health retreats, physical fitness retreats. You could stay at Villa Maria for four or five days if you were attending one of these retreats at a very modest price. Two years in a row, the Hampton Designer Showhouse was held at Villa Maria.

At least half a dozen fundraisers were held under a great white tent that was put up on the back lawn for the occasion. Now it will be over.

The Sisters of St. Dominic decided to part with Villa Maria because of the high cost of maintaining the property and because of an appraisal which said the property, if sold, could fetch $25 million. There was a lot they could do with $25 million.

They put it up for sale for that amount in April. And during the next month, they received so many bids in excess of the asking price that they made a remarkable decision. They had learned that because of zoning, a new owner could build a total of eight condominium apartments on the property. They could tear down Villa Maria. They could even try to appropriate the Village Green. So the good sisters decided that anything above the appraised $25 million was a blessing. They would take the highest bid over $25 million that met one condition — that Villa Maria not be torn down — and that no condominiums would ever be built. It would be just lived in, by a single family, just as it had been when it was built.

The name of the wealthy buyer should be made public by this weekend. No one will object at all if this new owner closes Villa Maria's doors to the public and returns it to the privacy for which it was originally built. It has been awake for 15 years. Just about everybody who wanted to has seen it. Now we wish its owners well as the memory of its good public works fade away.

Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it. I never kept it a secret.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunitite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunitite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

At very competitive prices.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance.

We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

Now you know, and I feel better."

book review: the beach book...edited by Duncan Bock

By Eunice Miller

If you like swimming and you don't want your book to get ruined, this is for you. This handy little book, believe or not, is entirely waterproof.

If you like to go to the beach and sit near the shoreline and a "hurricane by the name of Tess" hits you; don't worry; this book will survive.

Although being waterproof is how it is marketed, this little book is not "all wet." Inside its slick pages are reprinted ten well-written, imaginative short stories by award winning authors. The common wave is "The Beach."

The authors project upon the sea fantasies, dreams and fears. It is where little boys disappear on the back of giant turtles as recounted in The Boy Who Talked with Animals by Roald Dahl.

The sea is also the place that coughs up dead people, as told in the story Handsomest Drowned Man in the World by Gabriel Garcia Marquez.

In The Royal Palms Mathew Klam, a teacher at Southampton Writers Conference, inspired by his summers in Montauk, describes the beach this way: "The ocean was blue — deep brilliant turquoise — except that at noon, with the sun directly overhead, it turned the color of tin."

Paralleling the different ways we perceive the ocean, this is a story about the changing nature of self-perception and relationships. The main characters are Diane and her husband. They meet Rick and his wife, Joanie, on a vacation in the Caribbean. Joanie and Diane present as contrasting figures. Joanie is self-doubting. Diane, an actress, projects beauty and self-confidence.

Joanie's negative self-perception has led to her lack of sexual desire. After one romantic approach, Joanie rejects her husband, declaring, "My hair is filthy." In another episode, this time with Joanie as the initiator, she cries out that she felt like a failure in every way. But then there is a stunning turnaround. Joanie goes windsurfing in the ocean and has an epiphany. She reports seeing a giant sea turtle, swimming along side of her. Once Joanie's self confidence is buoyed, she is sexually energized. Sex researchers Masters and Johnson would be proud of her "Sensate focus" techniques: The husband reports she, "kissed my throat.....She held my head..... 'You're the best lover in the world,' she said."

An epiphany also occurs in the insightful and engaging work, The Ocean by Frederick Reiken. This is the story of despair and hope narrated by a thirteen-year-old boy who has to cope with the loss of his mother, the possible death of his father, moral failures and his own developing sexuality. At first he sees the ocean as keeping us "connected to everything that is dead". Coincidentally, a sea turtle appears here, too and the narrator tells his girlfriend, Dara, "Lying in bed, I kept imagining us holding hands and following the turtle."

Following the Turtle and the stories in The Beach Book looks at hopes and fears of the characters it brings to life. The collection in this book would fulfill the poet John Masefield's sentiments, "All I ask is a merry yarn." Take this treasure of a book to the ocean, read the stories with your families and live and enjoy.

The Beach Book Editor-in-Chief is Duncan Bock. It was published in 2005 by Melcher Media and is available at Borders Books, Beachbooks and The Open Book.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #353 Butter Late than Never

Summer is fast approaching. The season of sun and sunburn, sea and seasickness, fish and fishing lies, crabs and crabcakes. There's plenty of everything from that list, except crabcakes. Crabcakes are the most elusive things on Shelter Island.

How can a crabcake be elusive, you ask? It hath not legs to run as a crab, nor eyes to see its path, nor pincers to ward off the hunger of man, nay, not even a mind to know its danger. Yet, on my oath, the wagering odds of a crabcake appearing in a Shelter Island kitchen are finer yet than a fish's fur! Crabcakes make light toil. Crab meat mixed with seasoned breadcrumbs and an egg frieth in any frying fluid. But in order to become a crabcake, thee must first get the crab in the house, and therein lies the grub!

Sometimes there's a banging at my door early on summer mornings.

"David! What are you doing here this early? It's only 6:30!"

"No.. it's crab thirty...."

"Oooooo crab thirty.... wait. I'll get dressed." Within minutes we are dangling a piece of salt pork on a string off the bridge by The Dory.

"Damn! He ate my bait again! I'm gonna get him....." my brother swears a blood oath against his tormenter and future lunch.

The hours pass as we run low on bait and swear words. Finally, the bucket is full.

"How are we gonna hide these crabs from Mom?" I ask.

"Put them in your fridge. Let's try for crabcakes."

"We won't make it. She has crab sonar. She hears the tapping of their little back flippers in the bottom drawer of any fridge within twenty miles. She can hear through walls, across space and time, and finds them and eats them before we even know she's in the house."

"Let's try anyway," answers David bravely. "We won't wait, we'll cook them now."

We get in the house and throw the bolt. The big chowder pot gets filled with water and goes on the stove.

"Dave, the crabs are gonna smell when they cook! Her nose will find them! She'll be here any minute!"

"Well, can't you burn some candles or something? Your place always smells like a french....place of lucrative trade."

"Good thinking! I'll put some potpourri on simmer. We'll have crabcakes for lunch yet! Okay, they're bright red. Dump out the water, quick! I'll get some incense burning in the kitchen. Check the window... any sign of Mom, Dave?"

"Nope. Okay, we gotta crack these and pick out the meat, that's really gonna smell up the kitchen. Wet some towels, roll them up and seal the doors along the floor. I'll close the curtains."

"Better pull your truck around back, Dave. We'll have to gather up the shells and guts and get them outta here right away."

Unfolding newspaper and covering the counter

as quietly as we can, David takes a crab and tries to use the nutcracker as gently as possible so the crab cracks without making that wonderful crisp, 'eat me now', sound. I'll clean and pick out every fragment of edible meat.

Slowly, a pile of crab meat develops. We're on our fourth crab and there's nearly a cup of crab meat. Four more crabs to crack. I have seasoned crumbs on standby in a big bowl. It's nearly noon and the crabcakes seem only a plate length away. I warn my brother not to rush. We're so close. One mistake now will ruin it all.

He's having trouble getting the nutcracker into the right angle to crack a big claw. Realizing he'll have to apply more pressure and risk making noise, he carefully wraps his whole hand and the whole crab in a dish towel. I go to the window and peer out. No sign of mother. I slowly turn my head and give him the nod. His bear paw of a hand applies more pressure and I hear a muffled pop as the last barrier to paradise is breached. My brother and I exchange a smile of victory. I turn and head back to the kitchen when we hear it.... the knock on the door...

"Hi guys!"

"Hi, Mom," we both say in concert.

"Guess what? I was just driving by and I thought I'd bring over some freshly melted butter. I just had some left over from this morning. Oh.... what have you got? Some crabbies?"

I quietly put the bread crumbs away as my brother and I observed the commandment, "Humor thy mother and thy father."

Dan's North Fork

What The Heck Is Biodiesel?

Corn Oil Powers Diesel Engines At A North Fork Vineyard, Smells Like French Fries

By David Lion Rattiner

Osprey's Dominion Vineyard, located in Peconic on the North Fork, has taken a huge leap in the right direction when it comes to fueling its tractors and vehicles. The vineyard has decided to use biodiesel to run four of its tractors, a dump truck, seven utility vehicles and the vineyard van. What is biodiesel you ask? Biodiesel is fuel that can be put into diesel engines, but it is made from corn or vegetable oil. The concept of the technology has been around since as early as 1912. Rudolf Diesel, the inventor of the diesel engine, actually introduced the concept at the World's Fair in 1898 running his engine on peanut oil. By 1912 he was quoted saying, "The use of vegetable oils for engine fuels may seem insignificant today. But such oils may become in course of time as important as petroleum and the coal tar products of present time." Yes you read that right, the German guy that invented the diesel engine said this in 1912. Look it up, it's true.

Innovations and increasing oil prices have recently put biodiesel in the spotlight as the future of energy. "Even the U.S. army uses it, there is no reason not to use it," says Rick Neff, a mechanical engineer at Northeastern University in Boston, who is doing his thesis on biodiesel. The U.S. Army, in an ironic way, uses biodiesel to power its Hummers. Who would have thought?

So what makes a vineyard on the North Fork decide to try out such a strange form of fuel? The environment. To many of the good people on the North Fork, the environment is a top priority, and biodiesel fits the bill. It is renewable, burns 75 percent cleaner than diesel fuel, and is just as powerful. Bud Kohler, Osprey Vineyard co-owner, jumped at the idea of running his vineyard on biodiesel once he realized that the cost of purchasing it is now realistic on Long Island. Osprey Dominion Vineyard has purchased over 700 gallons of the good fuel.

I am so angry at myself that I have never heard about biodiesel. I consider myself someone who is an advocate of the environment. I mean, I'm not a tree hugger, but I worry and think about the environment. How could I have missed this whole biodiesel thing? I asked around the office here at Dan's Papers and found out that no one in the office, or the editorial department rather, has ever heard of the concept. You can run your car on vegetable oil, then fry up some clams while you're at it. It is just so amazing to me.

There are so many more benefits to using biodiesel in comparison to regular diesel fuel when it comes to the environment. The main reason why it has not been used as a primary source of fuel is primarily due to its cost. However, biodiesel costs $2.60 a gallon, which is not that much more than a gallon of regular diesel these days. The other amazing thing about biodiesel is a new tax credit for every $1 per gallon of biodiesel purchased. The tax credit, which will take effect is a large corn producer, which is what biodiesel is made from. If all of the vineyards transfer their fuel needs to biodiesel, the corn farmers on the South Fork would have a serious business relationship with the North Fork. Can you imagine truckloads of corn heading out to the North Fork in order to fuel the tractors that plow the wineries there? The idea is not that far fetched and seems to be a win/win situation for both the North Fork farmers and the South Fork farmers. and of course the environment.

You can buy biodiesel in Babylon at a company called the Vogelbilt Corporation, which introduced biodiesel onto Long Island and is the only supplier of biodiesel to the region. Osprey's Dominion Vineyard buys the biodiesel from them and plans on continuing buying the fuel as long as it continues to work so successfully.

One of the most interesting things about biodiesel, besides the fact that it is made out of corn, is its smell when it burns. The smell of biodiesel emissions is similar to the smell of french fries. If you think about it, it makes sense that the fuel that runs the machines on the North Fork smell like french fries because all of the kids on the North Fork really miss out on the smell. If you go to any other part of the country, it already smells like french fries, not because of biodiesel, but because of all the fast food joints that are spread all over the country. The North Fork, which is known for preventing this kind of business from entering its streets, does not allow fast food business to flourish, which is a good thing because it is so bad for you. However, the smell is a joy to a kid and I think the kids of the North Fork should at the very least, be able to enjoy the smell of fast food. Come to think of it, growing up, the only two McDonalds that I had ever been to up until the age of fifteen were the one in Southampton off of route 27 and the one in Mattituck. I never got to enjoy the experience of smelling the delicious fried food that so many lucky others get to whiff in other parts of the country nearly every day. Biodiesel and its proliferation would change all of that.

Thank your lucky stars that Osprey Dominion Vineyard has taken the bull by the horns on the North Fork and decided to power its vehicles using biodiesel. I think that it could really change things for the better when it comes to the environment and even, dare I say it, national security. If other vineyards get on the biodiesel bandwagon, biodiesel may even start to expand beyond business and government vehicles and hit the road. I think that one day I am going to drive a biodiesel car, and I think that you will too.

"To many of the good people on the North Fork, the environment is a top priority, and biodiesel fits the bill."

January 1, will actually make biodiesel more economical than regular diesel when it takes effect. Another big benefit of biodiesel is that it does not produce sulphur emissions, which is the primary component of acid rain.

Interestingly enough, the South Fork of Long Island

A Great Way to Spend a Saturday Afternoon

Looking for a nice way to spend the day? Try Jamesport Vineyards, located in Cutchogue. The sixty-acre vineyard owned and operated by Ron Goerler Sr. and Jr. since 1986 grows a variety of grapes for their wines. It's the high quality of their fruit that has gained their reputation in the wine industry. No matter what type of wine you like, whether it's a Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, Merlot, Cabernet, Sauvignon, Pinot Noir, Riesling, Cabernet Franc, Semillon, or Syrah, you certainly will not be disappointed. Whatever your choice of wine may be you can be sure that it will be tasty and flavorful.

During June, July and August the vineyards have musical entertainment in their large grassy backyard areas. Saturday June 11th, the vineyards hosted Kristi and Henry Diaz, a very talented duo, whose folk, blues and contemporary music entertained the crowd.

Some of the music they played included: "I Can't Help Falling In Love With You", "The Rose", "Time After Time", "Wild World", "Moondance", "Landslides" and "Over the Rainbow." Whether you come to the Jamesport Vineyards and taste their wines inside at the large tasting bar or outside enjoying music in the large grassy backyard. One things for certain, a good time will be had by all!

A 'Sideways' Look at Laurel Lake Vineyards

Ever since the release of the movie Sideways, Pinot Noir has been the "it" wine. Even here on Long Island, I've been told stories about customers walking into a tasting room and buying bottle after bottle of Pinot Noir – without even tasting it or knowing how much it costs.

As difficult as Pinot Noir can be to grow and make (well), that sort of impulse buying seems a little silly to me. But of the handful of Long Island wineries that make it, most do it well, including Castello di Borghese, Broadfields Wine Cellars (under the Tasting Room label) and Wolfer Estate.

Laurel Lake Vineyards in on Main Road in Laurel can now be added to the list. The 2003 Laurel Lake Vineyards Pinot

Noir ($30), the winery's first pinot noir release, offers classic aromas of wet earth, grilled mushrooms and cherries. In the mouth, this seductive wine is velvety and smooth with stylish cherry flavors. The finish is lengthy, and as these vines (planted eight to ten years ago) age, I expect Chilean winemaker Claudio Zamorano to craft wines that are even more complex and intriguing. He only made 100 cases this time around, so make sure you try it before it's gone.

While the Pinot is the standout of the wines I tasted, Zamorano's 2002 Chardonnay Estate Bottled Reserve ($16) isn't far behind. It is complex on the nose with tropical fruit aromas of pineapple and papaya mingling with hints of toasty oak, vanilla cream and spice. Medium-to-full bodied, it displays a nice balance between clean fruit character and toasty oak influence on the palate. The finish, which starts with pineapple and cream, finishes with hints of sweet spices. At $16, this is a very good buy and at $11, the 2003 Chardonnay is an even better one if you like less oak and more pineapple and citrus flavors.

The 2000 Cabernet Franc ($15), slated for a July release, is a little rough and angular right out of the bottle, but with a few hours to breath, its substantial tannins open up some to reveal spicy, peppery cherry flavors underneath. A year from now, I plan to taste this one again.

A respectable 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon ($15) is fuller bodied and fruit forward with raspberry and blueberry flavors, but I found the finish to be a little raw with oak, though it was also sprinkled lightly with cinnamon.

It's not a new release, but the Laurel Lake Vineyards 2002 Syrah ($19) is a promising, full-bodied red that is another varietal to watch at Laurel Lake Vineyards. It's one of the best ones made locally.

In a few years, I also look forward to trying the first Laurel Lake Vineyards Sauvignon Blanc. They just planted four acres this year.

Laurel Lake will be hosting two harvest festivals this fall – one on Saturday, September 25, and another on Saturday, October 5. Festivities include a gourmet lunch, special vineyard tours, hay rides, barrel tastings, grape clippings and cheese pairings.

For more information on Laurel Lakes Vineyards, its wines or its harvest festivals, visit www.liwines.com or call 298-1420.

Dan's North Fork

This fun, inexpensive Tex-Mex restaurant in Riverhead makes for a great place to go eat for a scrumptious meal with friends, family or both. If it's ease and casualness you're looking for, or a place to take the kiddies, Funcho's fits the bill.

With two locations one in Riverhead and the newest opening last July in Westhampton, it is the baby of first time restaurateurs, Janice and Alfonso Zavala. Alfonso "Al" Zavala is the head chef for both restaurants preparing unusual displays of this popular fun food.

There are four large tables outside, perched under two looming trees with enough shade for an afternoon fiesta, or for an evening with your amigos. The inside table seating is open and airy, coupling chairs with cushy wall benches thick enough to induce a siesta. With no reservations necessary, this hot spot among the locals gets packed after 8:00 p.m. This is no surprise due to it's heaping portions and varied selection, which only adds to the inexpensive fare of under $10.

Funcho's also caters to a quick take-out meal with all the fixings, which is difficult to find in a Tex-Mex restaurant. This makes it easy to take home doggie bags straight from the table, and you will with these super sized portions. Its simple serving trays and no hassle, seat-yourself-style allows you to serve yourself the way you like, without the delays of an overstressed wait staff. This no-frills atmosphere allows you to indulge without worrying about guacamole hanging off of your chin or wearing a dollop of sour cream. Grabbing your own disposable plates, cups and utensils allows you to spread out and share the delectable array of Mexican favorites, such as their taco, quesadilla, or fajita platters all served with chunky homemade guacamole, a hint of lemon and homemade crackling tortilla chips. Their quesadilla flour tortillas are stuffed with a savory mixture of your choice, then grilled and fanned out like half of a pizza. This thin, golden delight is dripping inside with cheese.

You can chose from the BBQ-dilla, Chili-dilla, Taco-dilla or Black Bean-dilla. The Funcha-dilla, at $7.99, is the grandest of them all and is addictive. This tightly packed, delectable combination of steak, chicken, guacamole, sour cream, beans, corn, onions, peppers and cheese makes for a tasty meal. It also comes in a kid's version, the Kids-a-dilla, for a mere $2.99.

Their mound of Cactus Crunch Nachos for $7.95 is a great appetizer to have alongside the quesadilla's or as a starter. These tortilla chips are smothered in chili, lettuce, corn, black olives, jalapenos, melted cheese, guacamole and salsa. You'll be fighting over who gets the last morsel.

And when it comes to taco's you can get two for under $5 with a choice of the Original Taco, Funcho Taco, Tijuana Taco, Greek Taco or their newest addition, the West Coast Fish Taco. With an option of a hard shell or soft you can have one of each. The hard taco shell, witch becomes soggy, was moist but remained crisp. It was stuffed with the tastiest beef, another with savory chicken.

The burritos are, "oh my gaud" delicious and huge!

The Funcho-rito, with grilled steak at $8.50 is not too spicy, with sautéed onions and peppers, black beans, cheese, lettuce, salsa, a spectacular mint-green colored rice (due to the sauces), and amazingly tender steak. The new Burried Burrito with grilled chicken at $6.99 is a heaping mound of solid joy with rice, black beans, sour cream and cheese wrapped in a 12 inch flour tortilla, then smothered in enchilada sauce placed in the oven with more melted cheese. There is also the Tex-Mex Classic and the Chili-rito.

If a sandwich is what you're looking for, they also have four wraps to choose from. But beware, all burritos and wraps are over one pound, so be prepared to share or take it home, for it's just as delicious the next day cold as it was hot. For the carbohydrate avoider, they've added a new tortilla substitute, for only a dollar you can have the low carb tortilla with only twelve grams of carbs.

To wash down your Funcho delight, there is an extensive selection of Stewart's soda, Snapple, bottled water and of course, Corona and Dos Equis XX beer with plenty of limes to match.

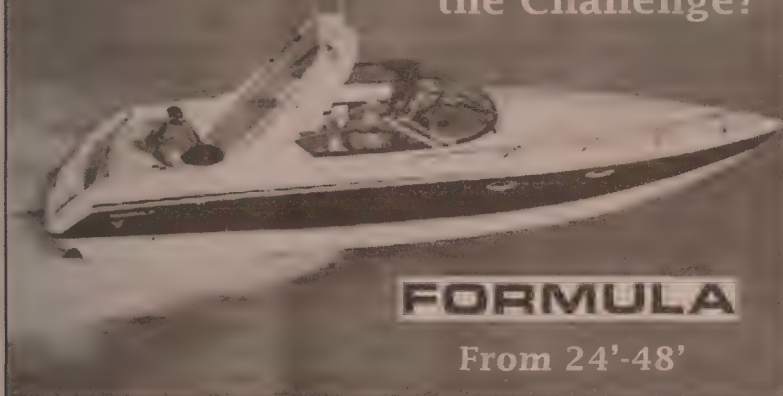

If you're able to save any room, they do offer two desserts. Churros, crunchy fluted warm donut rolled in cinnamon sugar for .99 cents. There is also an unusual cheesecake; a pastry tortilla filled with creamy cheesecake, fried until golden and rolled in cinnamon and sugar. Enjoy this for $3.95.

Whether you're in the Hamptons or the North Fork, Funcho's is there for you. On 127 Main St. in Westhampton Beach or at 1156 West Main St. in Riverhead, both locations are open seven days a week Monday - Friday 11:00 a.m.-9:00 p.m., Saturday 11:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m., and Sunday 12:00 p.m.-9:00 p.m. Buenos Dias!

The Washwick Agency Health Insurance Made Affordable

What happens when 2,000 self-employed business men and women, freelance artists, writers and other sole proprietors are brought together? They get group insurance rates that are far more affordable than they could ever get on their own, thanks to The Washwick Agency.

"Due to New York insurance laws, sole proprietors do not have the same access to affordably-priced medical and dental insurance as larger businesses," explained Karl Washwick, president of the Riverhead, Long Island-based agency. Many independent contractors, freelancers, and small businesses and their employees find insurance costs so exorbitant, that insurance expenses drain an excessive portion of their bottom line or, more frequently, they go without coverage all together.

With medical expenses soaring, people are taking high risks operating in business without proper insurance coverage. Many feel they have no choice.

"I am a small business so I understand the problems of small businesses," said Washwick, who founded the agency 25 years ago to meet the medical and dental insurance needs of an underserved, but significant population.

The Washwick Agency formed and acts as administrator of the Peconic Bay Business Association. By joining the association, the self-employed and their employees are eligible for group rate plans. Although based at the eastern tip of Long Island, the Peconic Bay Business Association provides its services to people working or residing in all of Long Island and all five boroughs of New York City.

By specializing in medical and dental insurance, Washwick feels his agency's efforts to get clients the best possible rates should stay undiluted." I don't do car insurance," Washwick laughed.

The Washwick Agency works closely with each client to best understand his or her insurance needs, and then helps choose the best of many available plans for that client. Each plan can offer a variety of baffling choices, such as HMOs, In-and-Out-of-Network plans and options for hospitalization and prescription co-pays, vision plans, and dependent child coverage. The Washwick Agency helps cut through the confusion. "I'll tell you the plans that are available, and the pros and cons of each," Washwick said.

The Washwick Agency also offers such "business solutions" as oversight of employee benefit plans and retirement savings plans.

The agency's mission is to provide clients with the best possible plan at the lowest possible cost. They promise to listen to your needs, sort through the maze of products and services available and help you choose what is most appropriate for you.

The Washwick Agency is located at 860 East Main Street in Riverhead, New York. For more information on their services call 369-0888 or visit their website at www.Washwick.com.

Phoebe Legere Plans To Rock Soundview In Greenport

The New York Times had this to say about Phoebe H. Legere, "A charismatic showman who works the audience with the razor edged skill of a veteran comic poking, teasing, and caressing it with clever turns of phrase both musical and verbal. She plays the piano with enormous authority in a style that encompasses Chopin, blues, ragtime, bebop and beyond, and she brings to her vocal delivery a four and a half octave range, and an extraordinary palette of tonal color and meticulous phrasing."

Okay, so I can't really write as well as the New York Times, but I can tell you that Phoebe H. Legere is a piano player and a singer and that she is coming to Greenport to play Saturday nights at the Soundview Restaurant. The dates she is playing are June 18th and the 25th and also July 2nd, 3rd, and 16th. She is playing from 8:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Did I also mention that she is fantastic?

There is just so much to say about this woman, it is ridiculous. The town of Greenport is lucky to have her come do a show. Phoebe has shared her voice and piano at concerts with the likes of Billy Joel, Hunter S. Thompson, George Plimpton, Steve Martin, Peter Beard and Larry Rivers, just to name a few. She has been playing all over the world, including China, France, Japan, South America, India, and Canada. What more can you ask for at a restaurant on the water in Greenport?

Phoebe seems to have found a love for the North Fork however, which shouldn't come as a surprise to any considering its beauty. The North Fork has the views of the Sound, the rich farmland, the gorgeous vineyards, and the fantastic food. It's no wonder that Phoebe likes the North Fork. An interesting piece of information that I found out about Phoebe is that she has been inspired so much by the North Fork that she has even written a song about its fishing culture called "The Sound." As I said before, there is a lot to say about this woman.

Phoebe is a classically trained musician whose talents not only are seen on stage but are also seen elsewhere. She wrote a story for Spin Magazine called "How to Be A Rock Star," she is a trained art historian who published two monographs on Larry Rivers, and was also the lead singer of his band. Her true talent, however, lies in the piano, and her passion for music will electrify you when you go to see her.

Live music is always worth checking out, especially when it is by a person like Phoebe Legere because she is so talented. What really makes Phoebe great, however, is not her long list of past concerts and people that she has played with, but the music that she is playing now. In fact, she is even putting her finishing touches on a CD that she plans to sell.

Her performances at the Soundview Restaurant in Greenport are going to be fantastic. Imagine it for a second. Walking into the gorgeous Soundview Restaurant right on the water, ordering a glass of your favorite local wine, and kicking back. Suddenly a beautiful woman walks out. It is Phoebe Legere, and she is about to start her set on the large piano that is waiting for her. After a few glasses of wine, the soothing sound of Phoebe tickling the ivory and the stunning view at the Soundview Restaurant in Greenport, you just might find yourself having one heck of a time. It seems like a no brainer to me to go and check it out.

Opera Of The Hamptons, This Saturday On The North Fork

There is opera and there is "Grand Opera" and Verdi's Aida is one of the grandest of them all. This Saturday you can check out Aida which is playing at the Castello Di Borghese Vineyard and Winery in Cutchogue at 6:30 p.m. The show, which was written at the request of the ruler of Egypt back in the late 1800's as part of the celebrations of the opening of the Cairo Opera House, rapidly became a major part of the repertoire of the world's great opera companies. Over the years, famed producers such as Franco Zeffereilli have brought their imagination and big budgets to lavish productions using massive choruses and spectacular settings and, of course, where possible, an elephant or camel or two. Each year in Egypt, Aida is shown in October, just for three days, in an open air theater, literally in the shadow of the Pyramids and the Sphinx at Giza.

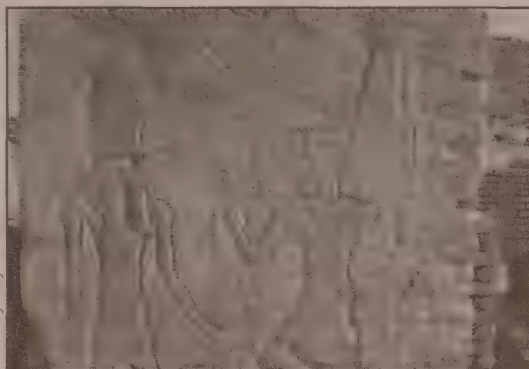

Here on the North Fork, we don't have the Sphinx, but we do have some wine that will lift your spirits as you enjoy this wonderful show that is being put on by very talented artists. The exceptionally talented actors and actresses that are in the show will have to resist enjoying a glass of wine on stage while the audience enjoys a glass in the seats. When it comes to the life of a touring opera company, Aida offers some very different challenges as Barbara Giancola, artistic director of Opera of the Hamptons explained. "This is a very challenging project for us. You could call it an absolutely insane idea, but when we were discussing this year's program, Atarah Hazzan, our music director, and I agreed that within this monumental work there is a very intimate and absorbing story of love, passion and politics all based on factual happenings in the times of the Pharaohs but still very relevant today."

An international cast of singers will perform an

abridged adaptation of Aida with soprano Rosa D'Imperio, singing the title role of the enslaved Ethiopian Princess, Aida, together with a newcomer to the company, mezzo-soprano Nina Lorcini, as Princess Amneris. Michael Scott Harris plays Radames, the Captain of the Guard, with basses Stephan Kirchgraber as Ramphis the High Priest and another newcomer, Nathaniel Jones, as the King.

Castello di Borghese has become one of the main homes for Opera of the Hamptons on the North Fork in recent years, largely due to the tremendous support Ann Marie and Marco Borghese continue to give to the arts out here. Listening to beautiful music sung by voices that thrill, plus the chance to sample Borghese's new wine releases, makes for an evening to look forward to.

An evening of opera and wine is difficult to beat on the North Fork and that is why the Opera of the Hamptons is always a success. It is a different and wonderful event that allows for a unique experience on the beautiful vineyards of the North Fork. If there is one thing that you do not want to miss this weekend, it is this. Don't worry, you don't need to bring your opera glasses this time.

This production of Aida is also part of the "Arts Wave" Long Island Spring Arts Festival, sponsored by Suffolk County's Office of Film and Cultural Affairs, which sets out to connect residents and families to businesses through the arts. If you are excited about music, wine, and a wonderful story, it might be a good idea for you to check out Aida this weekend.

— Roy Bradbrook

Peconic River Herb Farm- Not Just Herbs

A quarter of a mile north of Exit 71 of the LIE is the intersection of Route 24 (aka Edwards Avenue) and River Road. An equal distance west on River Road is the entrance to the Peconic River Herb Farm, fourteen delightful acres of sunshine, shade, plants and picnic tables situated between the Peconic River and the Riverhead line of the Long Island Rail Road.

I was initially drawn to the herb farm by its location and a passing interest in herbs and their many uses-in cooking: as seasoning for oils and vinegars; as herbal teas and flavoring in black tea; for medicinal purposes; in sachets and potpourri; and as seasonal wreaths.

But what's in a name? As owner Chris Spindler and her busy crew proudly proclaim, "We're not just herbs!" That's certainly the case. The Peconic River Herb Farm is a retail nursery that stocks a wide variety of plants. Yes, there are plenty of herbs on the premises, in hothouses and also displayed outdoors in pinwheel fashion around a central gazebo, but there are also trees and shrubs, annual and perennial flowers, grasses and ground covers, and some exotic plants as well.

The emphasis is on plants that are suited to our climate, including many that are low maintenance. A recent interest in plants that require little water (xeriscape plants) is also evident. For those who want a water feature in their gardens, there is a small pond near the river, with suitable plants, that might inspire some design ideas.

The pond and other display plantings are some of the best features of the nursery. The groupings of plants show what they will look like in combination and when fully grown, not just sitting separately in small pots. The tall trees on the property provide many shaded sections, and this allows for displays of plants that require shade as well as those that require lots of sun. (Tall trees also shade the parking area).

There is a sunny tea garden with tables and chairs for use by anyone who wants to rest and have a snack (bring your own). The tea garden can be reserved ahead of time by a group. In the shaded areas of the nursery there are many chairs, picnic tables with benches, and even a swing set by the river, where I spent some time enjoying the cool breeze and some coffee. With any luck, a train will come by while you are on the grounds, blowing its whistle.

I encourage you to check out the nursery website, at prherbfarm.com. It is very good, especially the "Links" and "Workshop To Go" pages. One good hint I picked up: go to google.com, click on "Images," and search for any plant you have ever heard of or are just curious about.

There are several events upcoming at Peconic River Herb Farm. On June 19th, Father's Day, there will be free gifts and cold drinks for all the dads. Bring a picnic lunch and sit by the river. Watch out for turtles. On July 8th, 9th, and 10th, the theme is Gardening with Tropicals. There will be free, cold granita drinks served. What is a granita drink? That's what I wanted to know, and so, what the heck, I went to google.com and clicked on "Images" and searched for "granita." Granitas look awfully refreshing, and here is the definition: a mixture of water, sugar, and flavorings that is stirred occasionally while being frozen to create a granular texture. It comes from the Italian, granira, to granulate.

On July 15th, 16th, and 17th, blue flowers of all kinds will be featured to celebrate the Riverhead Blues Festival. That I want to see.

Regasification Plant In Sound Is Bad For North Fork

Poor Long Island Sound. Our little slice of water heaven is already encumbered with a fragile eco-system. Having close to $45 million spent on the restoration of its waters by New York State, Connecticut, and the Federal Government, this "Estuary of National Significance" needs time to heal and thrive naturally. The Broadwater proposal in no way allows for this natural restoration.

Broadwater is a venture between Shell Oil and Trans-Canada Pipeline, that proposes the building of a liquefied natural gas (LNG) offloading station in Long Island Sound. The facility would be nine miles off Rocky Point, Long Island and 11 miles from the shore of Connecticut. It would be at least as big as the Queen Mary II and the base would cover an area of 7,000 square feet on the bottom of the Sound. The barge would be on a mooring system and would move depending on the tides and currents of the Sound.

Liquefied natural gas is a natural gas that is cooled to negative 260 degrees Fahrenheit, bringing it to liquid form and allowing it to be stored on giant container ships. LNG is a fossil fuel and a nonrenewable energy form, thereby countering all efforts to reduce Long Island's reliance on environmentally destructive fossil fuels. Natural gas experiences price fluctuations based on the market; it does not provide cheap electricity and directly competes with renewable technologies.

How does this all immediately affect us? Well, first of all the Broadwater barge would receive weekly shipments of LNG from two or three large tankers, which take up to 15 hours to offload. The LNG would be pumped through a 25-mile-long pipeline that needs to be dug into the bottom of the Sound in order to connect it to the existing Iroquois pipeline, running from Millford, Connecticut to Hunts Point in the Bronx. Because LNG is an explosive gas, there needs to be a one-mile radius around the facility, the first "Public No Access Zone" on the Sound. This means that no fisherman can go near it, not that any of them would want to go near such an ugly facility.

The Long Island Sound generates about $5.5 billion per year for the region's economy. Twenty million people live around the Sound's beaches and depend on it for both recreational and commercial purposes. The required "Safety Zone" would cut into commercial or recreational fishing, lobstering, sailing or boating possibilities. Broadwater would change Long Island Sound from a public natural resource to privatized commercial real estate. And let's not forget that it is a huge risk for everyone involved.

As I mentioned earlier, Long Island Sound is an Estuary of National Significance, as deemed by Congress in 1987. It has its own unique environment, created by the mixing of salt water and fresh water, thereby supporting an array of fish and wildlife, including 125 species of birds. Over 56 percent of all protected species, including sea turtles, rely on Long Island Sound's habitat. All of this would be in jeopardy with the coming of Broadwater. The marine life are particularly active from May to November, and any construction in the Sound during this time could seriously endanger them. Furthermore, when cutting the ditch for the necessary 25 mile pipeline, fine sediments and organic material will fill the exposed area. This will subsequently break down, and will cause a decrease of oxygen in the said area. This decrease would adversely affect the benthic community, shellfish and other bottom dwellers. Finally, the Broadwater facility will increase the emission of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. Carbon dioxide is the primary cause of global warming, and nobody likes global warming.

But wait, there's more. The most serious risk of the LNG presence in the Sound is what is called a "pool fire." A pool fire is when LNG spills into water and ignites in the air. It is extremely intense and burns with more heat and rapidity than any oil or gasoline fire. Pool fires cannot be extinguished; rather all of the LNG must be consumed for them to cease. Because of the extreme heat, thermal radiation could injure people and damage property at considerable distances from the actual fire.

If the LNG spills but does not ignite into a pool fire, the evaporating gas will form a vapor cloud that can drift away. If the cloud then meets with a source of ignition, the combustible gas portions of the cloud will burn, burning to death any organism in its way.

Another happy thought to add to these scenarios: asphyxiation. Exposure to the center of a vapor cloud could cause asphyxiation due to the lack of oxygen. Let's not forget about the extreme temperature of negative 260 degrees at which the LNG is kept. Contact with this alone could cause severe freeze burns and surface degeneration of ship decks or other metals and structural materials.

Since 1944, there have been 31 serious accidents involving LNG plants and transport vessels around the world. On January 19, 2004 there was a gas leak at a LNG processing facility in Algeria. The leak produced a vapor cloud, which was drawn into the boiler and subsequently exploded. The fire killed an estimated 27 workers and injured 74 others. This accident cost $800 million.

A plant like this does not belong in Long Island Sound. The risks are too great, the effects too detrimental, and the costs an accident are too big. For more information, contact organizations such as Save the Sound, Citizens Campaign for the Environment, or the Anti-Broadwater Coalition. Also feel free to contact Broadwater yourself and let them know how you feel. Their number is 1-800-798-6379, their email is broadwater@broadwaterenergy.com, and their office is at 30 West Main Street, Suite 301, in Riverhead. I know I'd prefer to find a dead fish on my plate in a restaurant then belly up amidst thousands of its brothers and sisters in the Sound, how about you?

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

In the beginning, in the flickering-flashy, fairytale world of Movie Land, authenticity tended to be pushed into the back seat of a shiny Mustang or a 1930s Studebaker. Directors like Robert Redford and Robert Benton, more accustomed to Beverly Hills or Madison Avenue, present a 1930s period film looking spanking clean and straight from the deft hands of carpenters, dressmakers and refurbishers. In this make-believe spit-and-polish soundstage setting, is it any wonder the actors project as much dimension as a paper doll?

Despite its title, Cinderella Man is no fairytale. As directed by Ron Howard (Ransom and The Missing), who's been working really hard to free himself of Santa Barbara polish, Cinderella Man contains residues of his bent for sentimentality, but his depiction of the 1920s-30s Depression pulls as few punches as the fight scenes in this boxing movie, based on the career of James J. Braddock, the prize fighter who in 1935 made one of the most spectacular comebacks in Boxing Ring history. Known in his staggering career as "Irish" Jim Braddock, he was retitled "Cinderella Man" by the brilliant chronicler of his time, Damon Runyan. His time was the much-less-than-perfect era of speakeasies, late night dealing and gambling and rough and tumble sports. Braddock had more than his share of tumbles and roughness. Born in the then aptly called "Hell's Kitchen" section of Manhattan, he fought his way to a successful light heavyweight professional career — handsome, aggressively assured and a well-liked favorite. This is the film's opening in 1928. It is only a few years later that the crash sent him and the nation into a deplorable tailspin of brutal deprivation. His recovery came about a lot sooner than the country's; in June of 1935, he fought a colossal battle for life. Cinderella Man, the film, chillingly conveys this heart-breaking crisis.

The power of both the portrayal and the movie itself is borne by the heavyweight acting ability of Russell Crowe. The weaknesses, and there are quite a few, are incredibly shored-up by this actor's sheer dint of strength and passion. When the script gets hung up on the ropes, or Renée Zellweger, as Braddock's wife May, gets too wimpy-weeping, Crowe is there like Atlas, holding it all upon his shoulders. However, he's not alone. Paul Giamatti, as Joe Gould, his pushy manager, is a swell sparring partner for Crowe. Their give and take is as tight and as secure as the tape wrapped around a boxer's fists. And, imparting a soul-searing record of it all is the cinematography of Salvatore Totino. The somewhat burnt-edge tinge of his lighting scorches the screen. His rendering of "Hooverville" in Central Park, a campground for the disenfranchised, chars the bones of trickle-down economics and should send a warning message to those too young to even dream of such an eventuality.

The shadow-casting ghosts of Rocky and especially Seabiscuit, another Depression-Era-Underdog-Wins-Out film, do not overcast Cinderella Man, but the movie isn't for everyone. The concluding prize fight, Braddock vs. Max Baer, is more blood and brain-crushing than the many others scattered liberally throughout the film, and they are brutal. Jeremy Schaap's book, also titled Cinderella Man (and, basically unrecognized by the film), takes a different viewpoint. Of course, he wasn't writing a Hollywood screenplay. When Mr. Schaap tars boxing as ugly, he means it. Mr. Howard's film has the tidy and bright aspects that would make Louis B. Mayer and Sam Goldwyn smile. Luckily, there's a big fella like Russell Crowe to wipe that greedy smile off their faces.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

preview: stars read at guild hall...by jan silver

The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall has lined up a stellar group of actors for a summer staged reading series. It began last Sunday evening with Dina Merrill, Ted Hartley, Nathaniel Calabrese and Danica McKellar reading A Delicate Arrangement by Dawn O'Leary. Next Saturday, June 25, Marcia Gay Harden, Juliana Margulies, Keri Russell, Bob Balaban and Andrew McCarthy will read several Pushcart Press prize-winning stories. On July 17, Edward Asner, Harris Yulin and Dianne Wiest will read George Bernard Shaw's playlet "Don Juan in Hell" – and there is more to come.

A Delicate Arrangement is a four-character play about artistic freedom. In an early scene, Helen, a talented, unsung artist, states, "In this world, you keep your passions to yourself if you want to remain passionate." This thought represents one of two legitimate views of an artist's responsibility.

Marcia Gay Harden

ty to his art – dramatically expressed in this play through well-drawn characters. Arrangement has been in development for 10 years and is ready for a full-scale production. In the staged reading, Dina Merrill, Ted Hartley, Danica McKellar and Nathaniel Calabrese were well directed by Robert Kalfin, assisted by Sandy Bianco.

Producers of A Delicate Arrangement, Playwrights Kitchen East, formed last year when Annette Handley Chandler and Karin Yapalater asked actor/producer Dan Lauria and writer/director/producer Joe Cacaci to move their Los Angeles-based Playwrights Kitchen to the East End. (Playwrights Kitchen produced Golf with Alan Shepard at Guild Hall last summer.) A question-and-answer with the audience follows the performance.

Next Saturday's reading of Pushcart Prize stories with Marcia Gay Harden and friends is a celebration of Pushcart Press' 30th anniversary. Editor and founder Bill Henderson named his small publishing house in honor of writers hawking their own works from Manhattan pushcarts when not accepted by big publishing houses. Henderson left Doubleday to start Pushcart Press in Wainscott. Some of the writers first published by Pushcart Press are John Irving, Raymond Carver, Andre Dubus, Susan Minot and Mona Simpson. The evening's program is co-produced with WordTheatre.

Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton brings the third act of G.B. Shaw's Man and Superman, "Don Juan in Hell," to Guild Hall on July 17 with Asner, Yulin and Wiest. It is the famous dream where Don Juan represents Man as spiritual creator, Doña Ana is Woman guarding the continuity of the human race, Don Gonzalo is a libertine and the Devil does his provocative best. On July 30, Wendie Malick heads the cast of Out Clause, a new play by Joe Cacaci about two talent agents fighting over the same mediocre client.

Next up, Playwrights Kitchen East produces a Carter Lewis black comedy, Women Who Steal, involving the wife and mistress of the same man (August 7). The Actors Company Theatre comes in on August 11 with Paul Shyre's adaptation of John Dos Passos' major novel of early 20th century America, U.S.A. Playwrights Kitchen East returns on August 29 with Kelly Masterson's new drama Against A Rising Sea. On September 4, Broadway actors Joan Copeland, Laila Robins and Larry Bryggman star in two Arthur Miller one-act plays, with a Q & A led by Martin Gottfried (Playwrights' Theatre).

Tickets for the readings are sold as a series, or individually for $18-25. They are available at the John Drew Theater's East Hampton box office from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. (631-324-4050) and on show evenings until 8:30 p.m. Tickets can also be ordered online at www.guildhall.org or Theatermania.com (1-866-811-4111). Tickets for next Saturday's Pushcart Prize readings are a benefit, and range from $45 to $100 for seats. A V.I.P. reception with the actors follows the reading.

The Heart of the Hamptons

The Heart of the Hamptons was a great success.
Over $300,000 was raised for the mission of the American Heart Association.

Special Thanks

To The Committee:

For all your time and effort that you put forth into this special event. It is because of you that the American Heart Association is able to fight heart disease and stroke.

To the Honorees: Dr. Falco & Andy Sabin:

For making our communities a better place to live and helping the American Heart Association be successful in their mission. Congratulations on all your achievements.

To Jon Gruen:

For taking on the challenging task of Event Chairman. You did an outstanding job leading the committee, and it was a joy to work with you on our lifesaving mission. You are terrific.

To Ellen Bitton:

For someone who agreed to help a little you certainly got involved a lot. Thank you for being so generous with your time, your home and your input. You have been an addition to the committee and I hope to work with you for years to come.

To Layne Lieberman:

After seven years of working on this committee with you, I could not be more thrilled that you have decided to join our L.I. Board of Directors. Congratulations, what an asset to our organization you are! Thank you for being so committed to our cause. Our community is a healthier place because of you.

To Allan Stimmel of Zabi's Wines and Liquors:

Because of your effort, you have made this event very special for our guests and me for nine years. Thank you for securing the wine items for our auction once again! You are the best.

To Siena Spirituality Center at Villa Maria:

Your hospitality has given the American Heart Association the opportunity to have an event at one of the most beautiful locations in the Hamptons. We are so sad to see you go - best wishes to you all.

To Starr Boggs & Beth D'Alessio:

For helping the American Heart Association follow through on the importance of healthy eating and showing us how delicious that can be. It has been an honor to work with you.

To Tom Jurgielewicz:

For supporting the American Heart Association East End Gala for nine years and donating the duck for the dinner.

To David Seeler:

You are a very special volunteer to our organization. Your efforts make a difference to many lives, thank you for all your help.

Jessica Malore, Danette Rocco, Brandon and Spenser Whale:

For sharing your stories of survival and hope, it was an honor to have you at the Gala.

Lavender, Flowers by Rori, Kim/Jon Designs and The Bayberry:

Thank you for the beautiful centerpieces, additional flowers and plants. We looked fabulous because of you.

L.I. Security Consultants, Bruce and Brian Bailey, Soulsystem Orchestra's, Ketel One Vodka, Peconic Bay Winery, Lenz Winery, Charles John Family Vineyard and Martha Clara, Southampton Publick House, thank you for donating your time and services.

To all the Sponsors, especially Andy Sabin, East End Cardiology and Harvey Ross, Auction and Raffle Item Donors, Journal Ad Participants and Guests:

For supporting the Honorees and generating funds for the fight against heart disease and stroke.

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

Lots of theater, music, comedy and benefits are here this week. An S.N. Behrman comedy classic opens at Bay Street Theatre, Homefront is at the Old Whaler's Church, Painting Churches continues in Quogue, and Hamlet ends its East Hampton run on Sunday. Renowned singer/songwriter Judy Collins is scheduled for two shows in Amagansett on Saturday, and Madeleine Peyroux sings at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday. The New York Times "Styles" reporter Alex Kuczynski speaks Saturday at the Parrish Art Museum, and celebrated comedian/actor Robert Klein performs at Bay St. Theater on Monday. Opera of the Hamptons brings Aida to Cutchogue on Saturday and Pianofest opens its recital season Monday evening at Guild Hall.

Several benefits this weekend (details at the end of this column): Animal Rescue Fund's spring garden tour; Group for the South Fork's annual dinner dance and auction; and the South Fork History Museum's dinner dance at its new home. Looking ahead to next weekend's events, there are many noteworthy benefits: the first Hamptons Home and Garden Show (516-991-4024), Hampton Designer Showhouse opening (631-745-0004), The Retreat's Artists Against Abuse cocktail party/plate auction (631-329-4398), The Nature Conservancy's dinner dance (631-329-3981), East End Hospice Summer Gala (631-288-7080), and American Cancer Society's Ann Liguori open golf tournament (631-287-1270).

THEATER and COMEDY

Bay Street Theatre's revival of S.N. Behrman's No Time For Comedy opens this weekend. Set in 1939, the story is as relevant today as when it was written, according to director/actor Daniel Gerroll. The cast also features Sharon Lawrence, Edward Hibbert and Mark Blum. Performances are Tues. thru Sat., 8 p.m., Sun. at 7 p.m. plus a 2 p.m. Wed. matinee. Next Tues. evening, the cast stays for a "talk back" with the audience after the show. For tickets ($40-65), call the Sag Harbor box office at 631-726-9500 or online at www.baystreet.org. On Monday at 8 p.m. the master of observational-style comedy, Robert Klein, will be onstage; tickets ($38) are available at the box office, online or by telephone reservation.

River Theatre Company performs the acclaimed Homefront, Stacy Dermont's original play based on the local, historic letters of farmer/fisherman James Foster to his sweetheart Phebe Rogers during the Civil War, this Fri. through Sun. at the Old Whalers' Church in Sag Harbor. Showtimes are Fri. & Sat. 8 p.m. and Sat. and Sun. 2 p.m. A "talk back" follows the two matinees. Tickets are $18 and all profits will be donated to the church's restoration (formally, First Presbyterian Church, 631-725-0894).

This is the last weekend to see the John Drew Theater/Morris Center's fine production of Shakespeare's Hamlet at Guild Hall, East Hampton. Directed by Josh Gladstone with a 21st century perspective on murder, mayhem and madness, and a wonderful performance by Michael Nathanson as the Danish prince, the show plays Thurs. through Sat., 7:30 p.m., with the final show on Sun., 4 p.m. Tickets are $20 adults, $18 Guild Hall members, $15 students; order at the box office (631-324-4050), online at www.guildhall.com or from Theatermania at 866-811-4111. There is a dinner/theater package with Citta Nuova restaurant, Newtown Lane, for $45 (through the box office).

The Hampton Theatre Company continues its production of Tina Howe's moving play Painting Churches at the Quogue Community Hall. Performances are Thurs. to Sat., 8 p.m., and Sunday at 5 p.m. Tickets ($20 adults, $18 seniors, $10 students) are available by calling 631-653-8955, online at hamptontheatre@optonline.net or at the door.

MUSIC

The sultry voice of French-born Madeleine Peyroux, who sings blues, country, torch and pop, can be heard Saturday, 8:30 p.m., at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Tickets ($45-65) are available at the box office (631-288-1500) or online at www.whbpac.org.

Opera of the Hamptons presents its second summer production, Verdi's dramatic Aida, Saturday, 6:30 p.m. at Castello di Borghese Vineyard, Rte. 25A, Cutchogue. Tickets are $45 in advance (call 631-728-8804, www.operaofthehamptons.org) or $55 at the door.

Pianofest, the program for emerging concert artists, begins its summer recital series Monday, 8 p.m., at Guild Hall, East Hampton. Tickets are $10 at the door (no charge for students) and season passes are available. Subsequent Monday concerts are at the Avram Theater, Southampton College, 4 p.m.

Headliners at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse this weekend: Jorma Kaukonen & Country Blue then C.J. Chenier (Fri.), Judy Collins at 7 and 9 p.m. on Sat., Robert Fripp's Solo Soundscapes (Sun.). review: painting churches

The theater at Quogue's Community House is spectacular. The deep grain of the wainscot walls and the burgundy paint provided a climate for art to flourish. It brought an additional dimension to the set of The Hampton Theatre Company's summer show, Painting Churches.

Painting Churches, the Pulitzer Prize-nominated play by Tina Howe, is the story of Margaret Church (Leslie Jones), a young portrait painter approaching the apex of her career, who returns to her aging highbrow parents, Fanny and Gardner Church, to paint their portrait. The Churches are packing up their Beacon Hill townhouse in order to move to their summerhouse full-time. Gardner Church (Larry Nicks) is a Pulitzer Prize-winning poet whose unspecified memory loss disease has rendered him a part-time invalid. Determined to write a literary critique on the entire spectrum of poets from Frost to Stevens to Yeats, he types away in his study while Fanny Church (Jane Lowe) packs away the family possessions, only stopping to put away some Dubonnet.

The play establishes the Churches as American Aristocracy from the get-go, as Fanny speaks to herself about how the Museum of Art once offered to buy the family's coffee spoons and we are to believe the two do quite well, save for Fanny's incessant shopping at thrift stores for her iconic large, loud hats. When Margaret arrives we see the contrast between the stuffy Fanny and the New York hipster.

Throughout the play, it seemed like all the characters were having individual conversations at the same time, but no one was listening to each other. The device worked well, adding both comical moments at some points and more poignant moments at other times, where the audience saw that this was how Margaret spent her entire childhood. It is through Margaret's confrontations with her parents that we come to understand their current circumstances, but it is very explicated. Because the parents do not partake in the conversation, and instead ramble on about entirely different subjects, Margaret seems to speak only for her own sake and the sake of the audience.

No one seems to remember anything. Fanny cannot recall the past, Gardner's short-term memory fades in and out (at one point reducing him to the demeanor of a seven-year-old child), and Margaret's memory, as scarred as it has made her, has been ciphered through the eyes of an adolescent.

Nothing has really changed and despite Fanny's attempts to explain the gravity of Gardner's illness, Margaret dismisses it as nothing more than her mother's over-dramatization. The parents refuse to sit still for the portrait and it takes goading and pestering for them to finally pose long enough to allow their daughter to finish portraying them. Despite heart-wrenching monologues by Margaret and Fanny, by the end of the play the relationships between the family members do not alter. The parents still live in a parallel world where their daughter stands on the outside as an observer, not a participant.

The set design by Peter Marbury set the stage for a great show. The grand bay windows, molded trim, and wallpapered hallways allowed off stage action to be conceived as believable, as if the characters were actually moving about in the apartment.

The play has its moments of clarity, when the audience realizes the cruelty of Fanny, the degeneration of Gardner, and the damage inflicted on Margaret, but none of these are completely fleshed out. It isn't the fault of the actors, who play their roles with close attention to their foibles, but that of the playwright who does the characters a disservice by seemingly developing them five-eighths of the way, leaving them unfinished.

As far as the portrayal of aging parents and a tortured artist, Painting Churches has enough to cover the $20 admission price. The evening was not set back by the playwright's flaws, but carried forward on the backs of the fine actors and Sarah Hunnewell's talented direction.

Painting Churches will be performed June 9 through 26. Thurs-Sat. at 8 p.m. and Sun. 5 p.m. Quogue Community Hall, Jessup Ave., Quogue. Tickets are $20 adults, $18 seniors, $10 students; reservations by telephone at 631-653-8955 or online at hamptontheatre@optonline.net.

preview: southampton rose day

On Saturday, June 18th, 2005 the best ticket on the East End of Long Island will be in the Village of Southampton at the Southampton Rose Society's Rose Day 2005.

The Society is planning a rose competition, rose parade, and rose-hat competition that will be exciting and fun! In addition to the planned events, the Society wants to make a bold statement about the importance of roses.

This full-day extravaganza will include the Society's annual rose competition. This year, the Society is initiating a full-out parade that will take place in the Village of Southampton. The parade will include floral displays and floats, marching bands, and a rose-hat competition, in which anyone interested in designing a hat and entering can participate. There will also be entertainers, free refreshments, and other events to celebrate the rose.

Rose Day 2005 will make a bold statement to support the East End community. With the billions of flowers displayed in gardens on the East End, and in the world, the rose has fallen, perhaps, out of fashion. In addition to re-activating interest in the rose, this is a great excuse for people to get together and have some fun.

The event has already aroused substantial interest among local gardeners, vendors, dealerships, and the local government. This year, the Mayor of Southampton will be on hand to cheer the proceedings and play host to the event.

Rose Day 2005 will include three main events. The Society's annual Rose Competition will be the center of the event. Open to Society members and the general public, roses can be entered into the competition by submitting them at the Rogers Memorial Library, 91 Coopers Farm Road, Southampton on the morning of June 18th between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. Blue, red, and yellow ribbons will be awarded for first, second, and third prizes, respectively, to the top three roses in various categories of the competition.

Join in the fun at the Rose Parade and Hat Competition between the hours of 10:30 a.m. and noon. The parade will commence at the Southampton Railroad Station and end at the Southampton Rose Society Rose Garden, and will include marching bands, floral displays and floats, and a number of exhibition cars and motorcycles – all decorated with roses! Trophies will be awarded for the best band, best float, and best hat in the parade. In support of the event, Southampton Village shops and vendors will open their doors and display their wares on the streets of Southampton. Even the Village Police and Fire Departments will get involved in the march with decorated vehicles.

Individuals interested in participating in the Rose-Hat competition can do so by creating a hat with either live or artificial roses. Competitors must register at the Southampton railroad station or at the Southampton Rose Society Rose Garden on the morning of June 18th between the hours of 8 and 10 a.m. Each participant will be given an entry number and invited to march in the parade wearing his/her creation. A silver trophy will be awarded for the best hat in the competition.

This seems like a fantastic opportunity to get involved in the start of a yearly event for the East End. This is an excellent opportunity to support the community and to witness history in the making! Isn't it time to smell the roses?

For more information, call the Southampton Rose Society at 917-881-0857.

Arts & Galleries

preview: panoramas: contemporary landscapes

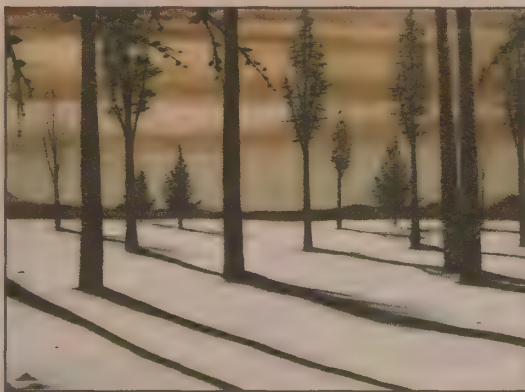

Latin American culture has become part of the Hamptons identity in many ways, and one of the most visible outlets for this cultural expression has been the art scene. Several galleries throughout the East End, including Hamilton Aguiar Fine Art in Southampton and The Crazy Monkey in Amagansett, showcase Latin American artists. One of the reasons art is such a beloved form of expression is that it transcends ethnic and geographical barriers. While illustrating the differences between us, art also has the ability to unite.

One theme that is universally significant is that of the landscape. Our surroundings impact our physical, mental, and emotional state. Seeing our surroundings depicted as art gives us a new appreciation. In addition, seeing someone else's landscape offers the ability to understand another perspective.

This week, Panoramas: contemporary landscapes will open. Featuring six emerging and mid-career artists of South American ethnicity, the show captures the landscapes that have composed their lives. Esperanza Leon, a curator who represents Latin American artists, has collaborated with Hamptons artist Hamilton Aguiar to host a show in his Southampton studio.

Hamilton Aguiar is a Brazilian-born artist who has called the East End home for over fifteen years. He used to own Artmosphere Gallery in Southampton, but has been more involved in his own work recently. His current selection shows oil over silver-leaf canvases of serene, meditative landscapes of woods, barns, lakes, and skies. Aguiar splits his time between here and Rochester, NY, so much of his work has a wintery feel. Still, the influence of Brazil is present in subtle ways.

Thales is another Brazilian artist who used to show

Hamilton Aguiar's Woodland Retreat, oil over silver leaf on canvas at the Artmosphere Gallery. He exhibits ethereal landscapes that juxtapose both playful and ominous elements. For example, he depicts cartoon-like pigs and toy soldiers.

Four artists represented by Esperanza Leon will be on display at the Panoramas exhibit as well. Their presence expands the spectrum of art media showcased.

Jose Pacheco Silva is a Miami-based artist who joined up with Esperanza at the South Florida Art Center. She was impressed with displays of miniature people in photographs and wire assemblages. These delicate pieces manage to capture both a comical and lonely sentiment.

Lucia Pizzani is a Venezuelan artist who utilizes digital photography to portray abstractions of nature. She zooms in close on subjects like tree bark or leaves, which could be interpreted as much more expansive landscapes. She also does the reverse, turning landscapes into abstract forms.

Maria Schon was born and raised in the United States, but her Venezuelan roots are still evident in her work. She depicts the beautiful and mysterious coastal landscape of Venezuela through her smooth-textured paintings on panel. She uses minimal forms reduced to four elements: mountains, sea, sky, and vegetation.

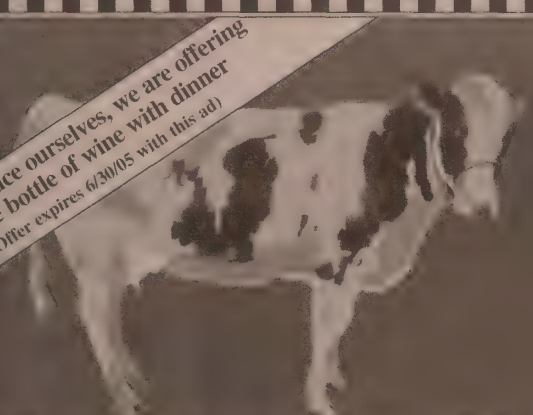

Aurelio Torres is an East Hampton-based painter who depicts the local areas we know and love. His work is influenced by his background in classical painting and he also demonstrates the harmony of elements of the South American Constructivist School. This art form emerged in the 1930s and 40s, and represents an organic, simple, minimal style. All of this he applies to scenes of land and sea in Sag Harbor, Wainscott, and Sagaponack.

Ms. Leon promotes Latin American art here in the United States, believing that there is a universal aesthetic that can appeal to everyone. It may not necessarily define a certain place, but its influences will still be a part of the work. When asked about this particular exhibit, Ms. Leon said that it is "really stretching the limits of what contemporary landscape is..."

Landscapes are often taken for granted as being exact depictions of what the artist sees. But these artists prove that everything is up for interpretation. That's what art is – the artist's take on a subject matter. Cultural influences are always going to play a part, no matter how subtle.

—Emily J Weitz

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

WILLIAM KING AT PAMELA WILLIAMS GALLERY

What do Bill King's newest sculptures have in common with The Theory of Relativity, Cirque du Soleil, Surrealism, and Conceptual Art? Nothing, you say? For this critic, the parallels are admittedly subtle but absolutely striking nonetheless. Mixing mostly current work, a few older pieces, a myriad of media and both inside and outside sculptures, Mr. King's show at Pamela Williams Gallery is simply extraordinary. Or is there such a thing as "simply" when it comes to "extraordinary?"

In a nutshell, Mr. King's works render complex concepts and references with clarity, particularly for yours truly; it's more a matter of context rather than the artist's formal aesthetics that we respond to. Even so, "respond" is perhaps too neutral a term when recalling the experience of seeing the work. Not only is Mr. King an authentic, original artist, combining elements that reside in reality with aesthetic aspects that never existed; he creates sculptures that turn light bulbs on, which cause us to say, "So that's what it means."

Mr. King evokes epiphanies. Isn't that what defines art?

His "Cirque" is a perfect example of such an experience: grasping an idea or revelation about human nature that is immediate, spontaneous and "true" for the viewer, but not necessarily true for anyone else. Its linearity is key. Suddenly, complex compositions, contortions, and configurations become clear, not only recalling performances by Cirque du Soleil but equally complicated equations (like the Theory of Relativity). Now we can see what follows what in a discernible, logical, vertical form.

Conversely, there's disconcertion and illogic at work. Many pieces fragment body parts, disconnecting them from the whole, and such dislocation recalls Surrealism. While this formal aspect of Mr. King's work is nothing new for him, it gives new meaning to the logic which this critic is finding in his present exhibition. Perhaps the attempt to prove that Mr. King's work has become conceptual art is not appropriate. Perhaps he is simply making fun of the "logic" and fragmentation.

Certainly, Mr. King's older pieces in the show (the copper female profiles) are anything but fragmented. They are whole and balanced and lithe, giving the impression that the forms are about to take off in space.

We also can't ignore Mr. King's male figure looking at what lies underneath his shorts. Is this the artist's final word on all this intellectualism yours truly has evoked?

Mr. King's exhibition will be on view at the Pamela Williams Gallery in Amagansett until July 10.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CONNIE FOLEY

"Quiet Time," this week's cover by Connie Foley, is not your usual pretty picture of fields filled with flowers. First of all, it has a figure in it, an unusual addition to most landscapes. Second, as the artist tells it, she has a special affinity for the piece. Ms. Foley recalls a similar scene when she first started coming out to the East End: a woman collecting blossoms to sell so she could care for her ailing mother. But the affinity didn't stop there as she remembers being "blown away whenever I would come unexpectedly across a field as I rounded a bend in the road."

Ms. Foley's penchant for flowers, however, began a lot sooner than her experiences as a professional artist. The more she thought about it, in fact, the more she realized that her connection to flowers may have started in Brooklyn where she grew up and where she lived next door to her grandmother.

"I remember my grandmother's lilacs and all those other old-fashioned kinds of flowers that are now popular," Ms. Foley says, recognizing the value of nostalgia. (She herself has a flower garden in her Southampton home filled with lavender and Russian sage.) "My aunt lived down the block, too. The presence of the family was so important in my development, in the support that gave me." Asked if her family also gave professional support, Ms. Foley answers without hesitation: "My uncle was an artist, an illustrator. From the time I was four years old, I was drawing with him. I can't remember a time when I didn't have a pencil or piece of chalk in my hand."

Ms. Foley's early exposure to art stayed with her: she received a degree in studio art and art history at Queens College where John Ferran was her teacher. She has since taught art herself, working with both children and adults.

But Ms. Foley's primary focus is still painting landscapes with a "hometown feeling." And ones she encounters unexpectedly. Presently, she is working on an image that she saw outside the Sagaponack General Store: a new scooter resting next to an old farmstand. "I like the generational idea," she says when retelling her experiencing of coming upon this picture.

Even so, Ms. Foley is never far from her love of flowers. "I like the way puddles reflect flowers in the field after a rain," she notes with enthusiasm. "I love the idea that if we nurture the land, the land will nurture us."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Foley's work will be on view at Southampton's Chrysalis Gallery starting July 30.

Family Fun

Follow Your Art

If you're looking for something to do on a rainy day, before the beach, after the beach or instead of the beach, may I suggest you head to Main Street in Southampton and check out Follow Your Art. The store, which is about to celebrate its first anniversary, is a paint-your-own-pottery studio open to people of all ages. The store is the collaboration of Deborah Belica and Dara Troshane, who each own similar stores in Garden City and Port Washington. The manager, Elizabeth Karsch, a professional artist, is quite adept at making everyone feel comfortable with a paintbrush, even those that don't consider themselves artistic. And customers are not limited to painting pottery. Follow Your Art also offers jewelry-making, mosaics, and decoupage. As the name suggests, this store has something to suit anyone's particular talent.

Walking through the front door and into the cozy, sun-flooded store, the first thing that catches the eye is row after row of bare pottery stacked on shelves lining one wall. It seems that anything one could think to paint—the traditional plates, bowls, platters and mugs, to more unique items such as shoes (for purely decorative purposes only), piggy banks and picture frames — is on these shelves. Covering the other walls in the store are pieces painted by members of the staff, who can create custom pieces upon request. Customers usually sit at one of the four wooden tables in the store (all covered with paper to protect against the inevitable spill or errant paint brush), but there are also seats at a counter facing out onto Main Street.

The first thing to do is choose which piece you are going to paint, and then choose your colors, of which there are dozens. Since the paints change color once the pieces have been fired in the kiln, there are small tiles showing how each color looks post-kiln. After selecting a piece of pottery (or two or three) and paints, a staff member will explain the basics, such as putting light colors on before dark colors and how many coats of paint a project will require. Then customers are left alone to work on their creations. If someone has "painter's block," there are design books for inspiration. The staff is always readily available in case someone needs help executing his/her vision or has a technical question.

My personal favorite activity is mosaics. You begin with a wooden object, such as a mirror frame or a birdhouse. Then you sift through the trays of broken pottery, which come in a wide variety of colors and patterns, and choose pieces that will fit together, both physically and aesthetically. Using grout, you then adhere the pieces of pottery to the wooden object, leaving small spaces between each piece, to form a mosaic. It's almost like fitting pieces of a puzzle together. When the mosaic is finished, grout is used to fill in the gaps. Customers can either do this themselves or have a staff member complete the mosaic for them.

In addition, Follow Your Art also offers jewelry making. The store has a vast array of colorful beads and sterling silver charms in every size and shape. They provide all of the materials and tools needed to complete a bracelet, necklace or earrings that you can wear right out of the store.

If you prefer a more structured environment, Follow Your Art also offers classes for children and adults, and children's birthday parties. For birthday parties, one of the more popular activities at Follow Your Art, the store can accommodate up to 35 kids. They can also arrange for a staff member to come to your home for a party.

The children's classes are fully art-oriented, using such media as pastel, watercolor, pencil, acrylic, clay and decoupage. Past projects have included self-portrait, still life and hand building with clay. For adults, the store offers an animal print class, glass painting and mosaic classes and one class titled "I'm Afraid of a Paintbrush." On Thursday and Friday evenings, from 7-10 p.m., the store is open exclusively to adults, who are free to bring friends, food and drinks.

Follow Your Art's hours are as follows: Monday 11 a.m. – 7 p.m.; Thursday and Friday 11 a.m. – 9 p.m.; Saturday 10 a.m. – 8 p.m.; Sunday 12 p.m. – 6 p.m. In July and August, the store will be open seven days a week. Prices begin at $10 an hour for children and $12 an hour for adults, plus the cost of the pottery. The hourly rate includes paints, instruction, glazing and firing the piece in the kiln. Prices vary for classes and parties. For more information visit Follow Your Art at 59 Main Street in Southampton or call (631) 287-6187.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Father's Day and Mother's Day are celebrations of family and those who give time out of their lives to enrich ours. It is an honor for our mother's and father's and honor is always cause for celebration.

Although officially not yet summer (just a few days away) the heat wave speaks otherwise. And summertime means lots of outdoor cooking. I personally love to grill, but if the father in your life would like his turn at the grill, on Father's Day, go for it.

Whether dad is a cowboy style beef eater or prefers a lighter touch with fish on the grill, here are some thoughts that will please dad on his day. A fine quality steak with bone imparts great flavor, especially when seasoned à la Tuscan style. For a take on the classic, rub the steaks with cut cloves of garlic, marinate in extra-virgin olive oil before grilling, then finish with a healthy squeeze of tart lemon juice. To give it an American twist, serve the steaks with grilled Vidalia onions and sweet tomato garnish.

Happily wild salmon is still in season (I wrote a column a couple of weeks ago on the health benefits of this remarkable fish), delicious prepared with cilantro pesto. The charred, crisp skin of this flavorful fish marries well with the spicy tang of cilantro.

Whichever course you take, beef or fish, be sure to add meaty grilled portobello mushrooms to your menu. They'll surely be a hit at your thoughtful Father's Day celebration.

SIRLOIN STEAK WITH GRILLED ONIONS

Grill the onions ahead then serve topped with sliced tomatoes to accompany the steak, cowboy style.

Serves 4

For the steaks

4 sirloin steaks, about 1 1/4 inches thick
2 garlic cloves, unpeeled and cut lengthwise

Freshly ground pepper
4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
2 lemons, halved

For the onions

3 large Vidalia onions, peeled and sliced 1/4-inch thick

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt
Freshly ground pepper
2 large ripe tomatoes, halved
Fleur de sel (sea salt) for garnish

1. Put the steaks on a platter one layer deep. Rub both sides of the steaks with the garlic halves and season generously with the pepper. Drizzle steaks with oil and let marinate, covered with plastic wrap, at room temperature for about 1 hour.

2. Insert toothpicks into the rounds of onion to hold them in place on the grill. Brush with olive oil and sprinkle with kosher salt and freshly ground pepper.

3. Meanwhile, prepare a charcoal or gas grill. The heat should be hot enough for you to hold your hand over for 4-5 seconds before pulling away. Place the onions on the grill and cook about 3 minutes on each side until golden. Transfer to a dish, remove and discard the toothpicks and set aside.

4. When ready to cook the steaks, sprinkle both sides with salt, place on the grill and cook about 5 minutes on each side for medium rare. Meat should be springy to the touch. Transfer to warm plates with lemon halves to be squeezed over the meat. Accompany the steaks with grilled onions topped with tomato halves sprinkled with fleur de sel.

GRILLED SALMON FILLET WITH CILANTRO PESTO

The charred, crisp skinned slightly undercooked salmon fillet marries well with the spicy tang of cilantro pesto.

Serves 4

For the cilantro pesto

1-2 cloves garlic
2 packed cups fresh cilantro leaves, washed and spin-dried
1/4 cup pignoli nuts
1/2 teaspoon coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil

For the salmon

4 boneless salmon fillets with skin, about 6-8 ounces each

Coarse (kosher) salt
Cilantro sprigs for garnish (optional)

Dining in the Hamptons

"Excuse me, what wine goes with ribs?" Probably the oddest question I have ever asked at a restaurant, but at CoQueze, it seemed to make sense. Situated in the historic Maidstone Arms Inn in East Hampton, CoQueze has been making news with its unique menu. In an attempt to make dining a more enjoyable experience (which it should always be) Chef Michael Mandleur has designed a menu of inventive meals, large and small.

We were led to a cozy corner in the main dining room and seated at a plush banquette decorated with blue rooster-embroidered cushions. The rest of the room was more conventional in its seating, save a table for two with high-backed upholstered armchairs overlooking the entranceway of the Piano Bar. The bar itself was quite nice and welcoming. High backed chairs were arranged near the fireplace and live music resonated from the piano. In the dining room the sounds of the piano were subtle, leaving us to maintain conversation without battling over any background noise.

The menu seemed, at first, overwhelming. Traditional fare was tossed out the kitchen window to make room for interesting and flavorful ideas. Debating between the Stilton Blue Cheese and Pear Halves or the Fig Pancakes and Grilled Portobello with Arugula, I asked our extremely helpful waitress, Keera, for her recommendations. She suggested the Wild Mushroom Toast to start and as an entrée, she told us the Seared Sea Scallops with Braised Pork Spare Ribs was a very popular dish. I ordered the Stilton and pears and went with her recommended ribs, while my apprentice reviewer, Lauren, opted for the wild mushroom toast and Petite Filet Mignon.

Their wine list was vast; flipping the pages made my head spin even before I had my first glass. To make pairing wines easier, on the top portion of the dinner menu (which opened like a place seating card) was an abbreviated list of 40 whites and reds by the glass. I opted for a 2002 Sybille Kuntz, Riesling to start, while Lauren ordered a Pinot Grigio. The Stilton and Pear was quite good. To my surprise, the cheese had been melted onto the three pear halves instead of being crumbed and scattered about the plate as many restaurants do. The warmth of the cheese opened up its flavor and the blending of saltiness and sweetness was just so. The dish was finished with candied pecans and everything was arranged around fresh endive, which added just the right texture. I practically had to pry a taste of the wild mushroom toast away from Lauren. Truthfully, she was more than willing to share, although I know secretly, she would have loved to eat both pieces herself. The wild mushrooms were generously spread over a warm layer of creamy goat cheese, and served on crisp slices of bread.

It wasn't until the ribs were placed in front of me that I realized I might have to eat them with my hands. I was frightened to death at the idea. But when I cut into the meat to separate the two bones, my worries were set at ease. The meat just fell off.

But what to drink? Pairing wines always takes a little effort and although I should have been planning on what to have before the entrées arrived, I hadn't. So when Monica, our hostess, stopped by to see how everything was, I asked her, "What wine goes with ribs?" She was quick to suggest a 2002 Nebiolo Langhe from the Paola Scovino vineyard in Italy. It was spicy as she said it would be, but didn't dominate the ribs' flavor. Although there were only two scallops they were amazing, large and full of flavor. Lauren's filet mignon was tender and the drizzled Bordelaise sauce complemented the meat nicely.

Dessert was refreshing. I ordered the White Chocolate Crème Brulee and Lauren opted for the profiteroles. The waitress looked upset and said, "I was hoping someone would order the 'coffee and donuts.'" Her recommendations had been on the mark all night so no reason not to go along with them now. I wasn't actually in the mood for coffee, but I was assured that it wasn't actual coffee, but an espresso mousse for dunking the homemade donuts. The presentation was great. Two powdered, still-warm donuts served next to an espresso cup filled with a dark mousse on the bottom and a lighter mousse on top. The profiteroles looked fantastic, served with vanilla, chocolate and strawberry ice cream and a chocolate sauce. My only complaint was that the "Coffee and Donuts" was not better explained in the dessert menu; otherwise I probably would have ordered it in the beginning.

I was quite impressed with the meal as a whole; the service was rather good and I was left feeling satisfied. I would strongly recommend CoQueze to anyone looking for delicious and inventive food and fine wine in a pleasing and historic setting.

Breaking Bread at the Blue Duck

I will never look at bread the same way again after learning how the daily bread is prepared at the outstanding Blue Duck Bakery Café on Hampton Road in Southampton Village.

For walk-in customers, Blue Duck offers a variety of delicious freshly made breads, cakes, pies, pastries, cookies and even lunch sandwiches served on freshly made rolls. The colorful display is quite a sight to behold, especially considering that virtually everything there will be replaced the next day. Blue Duck also offers freshly brewed coffee and has a refrigerator containing a selection of drinks. There are several simple tables and chairs in the shop. And on top of all that, Blue Duck provides its products to several local restaurants, farmstands and even the Sag Harbor Farmers' Market.

Creating all this bread starts at dawn the day before the bread is to be sold. Over the course of several hours, bakers work to mix the flour, water and yeast in enormous vats, making so much dough that it seems almost impossible to imagine how it will all be turned into bread. Various types of dough are made each day, and each type requires absolute precision in relative amounts of flour, water and yeast, depending on the type of bread and what is being added (olives or nuts and raisins, for example). The dough then ferments for three to four hours, again depending on the precise requirements of the particular bread being made.

Photos by David Stoll

Which brings us to the morning, almost 24 hours after the process started. The fresh bread is ready to be eaten, and the process begins again for tomorrow's bread. What makes this all the more amazing is that, while the bread is fermenting or chilling the bakers are working on the many cakes, cookies, pies, brownies, éclairs, cupcakes and pastries. The magnitude of the operation is astounding.

Blue Duck is owned by Keith Kouris, the master baker, and his wife Nancy, who handles the business side and made up the name out of the . . . eh . . . blue. Kouris did not start out as a baker, though. His original dream was to own a deli. To make the money to buy a deli, he delivered freshly-made Italian bread from up-island to the Hamptons, which he had discovered and fallen in love with when he was 18. Although this work piqued his interest in baking, he did buy a deli, in Huntington. That deli had its own Scottish baker who made savory breads like meat pies. Kouris helped out when he could, further developing a passion for baking.

Kouris then sold the deli business and worked for a variety of private bakeries, honing his craft,

It is now the afternoon before the bread is to be sold. The dough from the huge vats is now formed into the proper shapes, over the course of about four hours. There are rolls, there are boules, there are loaves. I was given a tour of the kitchen during this phase, and seeing the many dozens of shaped breads was an amazing sight. Once the dough is formed, it is all refrigerated until 11 that night. Then, the night crew of bakers comes in to remove the bread from the giant refrigerators and allow it to come to room temperature. The bread is then baked, usually for about three hours.

1. Prepare the pesto: Place garlic cloves in a food processor and process until finely minced, pushing down sides as necessary. Add cilantro leaves and process until chopped, then add pignoli nuts, salt and pepper, and process until thoroughly blended with the cilantro. With machine running, add oil through the feed tube in a steady stream. Scrape into covered container. Can be prepared up to two days ahead. Refrigerate until ready to use.

2. Prepare your grill until coals are a gray ash or preheat a gas grill to medium-high. Spray the grill with oil to prevent skin from sticking. Rub kosher salt on the skin side of the salmon and put on the grill. If using a gas grill adjust the heat to medium as fish may be too close to the coals.

3. Grill the fish for 8-10 minutes, depending on the thickness of the fillets. As the fish cooks the flesh will become opaque from the bottom and the skin will char. I prefer to cook the salmon until the surface is still a bit pink, or slightly undercooked. To cook it longer, carefully turn with a spatula and cook for another minute or two.

4. Meanwhile bring the pesto to room temperature and taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. The sauce should be a little runny. Spoon a little sauce across the center of each fillet. Garnish with cilantro sprigs, if desired, and serve.

GRILLED PORTOBELLO MUSHROOMS

You'll love these grilled portobello marinated in a savory basting mixture.

Serves 6-8 as appetizer or side dish

3 large (about 5-inches in diameter) portobello mushrooms

1-2 cloves garlic, finely chopped

1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

Generous pinch red pepper flakes

5-6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Cut stems from the portobello mushrooms, level with the cap. Cut a criss-cross pattern in the stem end so mushrooms cook evenly. Peel the caps and score the mushrooms with a sharp paring knife. Wipe the gills clean with moist paper towels.

The mushrooms are ready to marinate.

2. In a mixing bowl large enough to hold the mushrooms put in the garlic, rosemary, salt, pepper and pepper flakes. Slowly whisk in the olive oil until mixture is homogenous. Place the mushrooms cap-side down in the marinade and allow to sit for up to an hour. Carefully turn the mushrooms in the marinade from time to time.

3. Preheat gas or charcoal grill to medium-high. Place the mushrooms cap side down on the grill and cook about 4 minutes, basting with the marinade occasionally. Watch for flare-ups from the oil in the marinade and be prepared with a squirt water bottle. Turn the mushrooms, and cook another 3-4 minutes until tender, basting with remaining marinade.

Allow to come to room temperature and cut into wedges for serving.

Silvia's Lehrer will give a cooking class featuring a Mediterranean Summer Buffet, to take place on Thursday, June 30th at 6:30 p.m. at the Wolfer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack. Call 537-5106 ext. 20 for information and registration.

largely with Italian and German mentors. He then enrolled in the French Culinary Institute. (Anyone who cooks well but fears baking, like me, knows that cooking is to baking as finger painting with water colors is to master oil painting.) Six years ago, the building in which Blue Duck resides became available for rent, and Blue Duck was born.

Kouris loves running a local operation and has no interest in expanding his base of commercial customers up-island or to Manhattan. And I doubt he would have room anyway. As it is, his multi-room kitchen is filled to the brim with bakers and bread ovens, pastry ovens, refrigerators, mixers, sinks and storage space to hold the two tons of flour Kouris uses each week. By the way, Kouris's artisan breads are made without preservatives, and without any bleached flour.

Because I am so devoted to you, my dear reader, I consented to sample two types of bread and several pastries so as to report on their quality. Although I do not have much of a sweet tooth, I had to admit that the pastries and cookies were sinfully delicious. As for the bread, let me just say this: whoever thinks that serving prisoners nothing but bread and water is cruel and unusual punishment has obviously not been to the Blue Duck Bakery.

The celebration will be held June 18th & 19th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. If you love the taste of authentic fine Jewish Deli delights stop by 100 Pantigo Road in East Hampton (Montauk Highway - Route 27, next to Peconic Beverage).

There will be special treats for all with games, prizes, entertainment, and gifts. In addition, the kids will get a keepsake photo with Sponge Bob and The Bagel Monster. Children will also create their own bagel necklaces to take home. There will be bagel balloons for everyone too. Don't miss the opportunity to meet the Goldbergs at this fun filled family event.

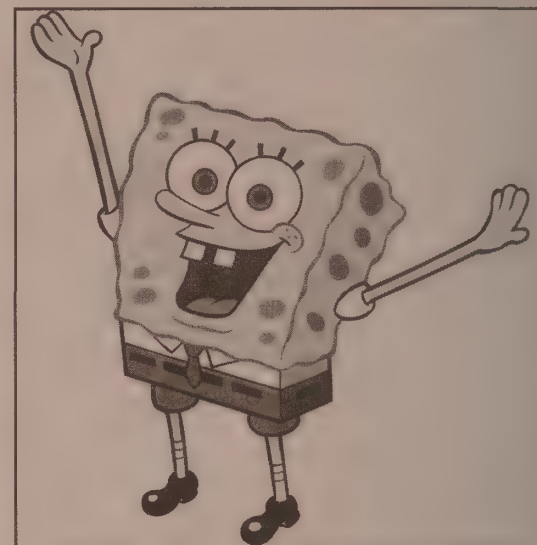

Goldberg's makes the freshest breakfast, lunch and dinner including bagels, flagels, giant hot pastrami and corned beef sandwiches, smoked fish and spreads, crisp fresh salads and much much more. The secret to Goldberg's success comes from the special care they take and family legacy that has followed them since Izzy Goldberg fled Poland to come to America in 1920. With him, he brought his book full of recipes that included his father's top secret "bagel recipes." Years later, Izzy married Helen Fetner and moved to Brooklyn. Shortly after he opened his first Bagel Bakery in the Bronx where he used a brick oven and a wooden plank to create his special bagels. In those days, Izzy baked mini bagels that were offered plain or with salt for only 1 cent. Imagine paying only one penny for a delicious bagel?

After Izzy and Helen had their four sons, Artie, Al, Jerry, and Marty, they eventually expanded to Brooklyn, Manhattan and New Jersey (where they opened the first bagel restaurant in that state).

Father's Day weekend is the perfect opportunity to share in the fun with the Goldberg family. Meet Uncle Marty and Artie's son Marc along with their family for a spectacular event.

JUST FOR KIDS

Being Cool Without a Pool

Being Cool takes on a whole new meaning for your children once that last school bell rings. The textbooks are put to the side, and the feeling of freedom is everywhere. The summer sun can be pretty hot and intense and there's nothing quite as fun as a water game to cool them down and keep the summer smiles flowing!

When I was a child, my neighborhood would come alive during the summer. All the kids on the block would pop their heads out and say "What do you want to play today?" Sometimes it would be soccer, riding bikes, or walking up to Carvel for ice cream. But more often than not, we'd yell "Slip and Slide!" and out would roll the big yellow plastic mat. Parents would scurry to and fro, hooking up the hose and making sure that those metal brackets that held the plastic down were in place so no one would get hurt. We'd line up, wondering who would be the first to test the slipperiness of the Slip and Slide and anxiously awaiting our turn.

Well, let's just say that Slip and Slide is still around and bigger than ever. It comes in so many more varieties than the yellow plastic plain one that I remember from my childhood. www.qualityrecreation.com offers nine amazing Wham-o slip and slide varieties. For your sports enthusiast child there are three great slip and slides: Splash Track, Soccer Soaker and Splash Soaker Slip and Slides. Most offer an 18-foot track, made much more durable than when I was a child, and all offer a soft way to land. The Splash Soaker has a baseball theme to it where you do a home run into an attached wading pool made of soft, air-inflated material. Splash Dunk features a basketball net and soft ball to slam dunk in. You get soaked as you sail your way past the net and score the winning point. The Splash and Dunk Slip and Slide looks like the ultimate one to have. It features 22 feet of watery enjoyment. As you sail down the slide you go under an automatic "splash and dunk" water tunnel and cool right off.

Often times, the kids on my block would be just as excited to cool off in a sprinkler. We had the kind that offered an 8 foot spray and went back and forth. It was a blast running from one side to the other to catch the spray. Now sprinklers come in more varieties than ever. KB Toys has a wild Beach Ball Sprinkler where you inflate the ball, insert the hose and let it roll. Water shoots out from four different waterheads or the adults can fill up the water pouch underneath the ball and make it a stationary sprinkler. Toys R Us features seven different kinds of sprinklers. For the little ones (ages 24 months -6 years), there's the Playful Paws Sprinkler which has cute, colorful dogs, cats and a mouse on a stationary sprinkler system. For the older child (ages 5-10) there's the wacky Splash Balls Sprinkler which is meant to simulate a ride on a water park. Colorful balls fill with water and splash in every direction. Eight mini sprinklers are built right in, so cooling off is not a problem with this device.

Remember sand boxes? Well, now these mini-beaches feature a water component. Sand-n-water tables have become very popular with parents of young children. The website www.furniture-4kids.com has a wonderful variety of toddler-tested tables. The See through Sand and Water table lets children observe the wonders of buoyancy. They can squat down from their standing position and just see how the boats float and why certain ones sink. The Three Tub Sand and Water Table is toddler height and features 3 areas for creative play. Stock up on some fun sand toys and teach your child how to build the biggest castle around.

An older child might enjoy cooling off with a water balloon game. Log onto www.northernrtool.com to see a giant water-balloon sling-shot which can shoot a balloon 100 yards. It offers a disclaimer that you should never aim at people, but what fun it would be to have a competition to see who can shoot the balloon the greatest distance. You can cool off just filling them up! The site also features 100-yard and 200-yard launchers, and each kit features a multitude of colorful balloons and detailed instructions.

So this summer, it's time to stay cool in a safe, fun way. Make it a summer filled with lots of great memories and enjoy splishing and splashing!

What is most impressive about the newer cars is how well they handle and brake. The older cars, as compared to the more modern versions, were simply terrible. Some four-door sedans today handle far better than many sports cars of just a decade ago. The super exotic sports car models have acceleration numbers that were the domain of methane burning quarter-mile dragsters of just a few years ago. Zero to 60 in three and a half seconds is commonplace, with top speeds approaching 200 miles per hour. In the fifties, a sports car was considered fast if it accelerated to 60 in less than ten seconds. A top speed of over 100 was admirable.

The 1965 356 Porsche, certainly one of the best sports cars of the era, had to be thrashed to accelerate to 60 in under ten seconds. It needed a strong tail wind to get to about 115. There was only so much one could do with a 1600cc eighty-eight horsepower four cylinder pushrod engine, even with a Porsche name on the engine block. This performance was considered to be one of the best of the breed, a German wondercar, one of the dream machines of that time.

One of the most delectable sports cars of all time is the Mercedes 300SL Gullwing. Designed in 1954, it was one of the fastest sports cars of the era and yet it could only accelerate to 60 miles per hour in about eight and a half seconds with a top speed of about 135. Today, a Honda Civic SI or a Ford Focus SVT can match these speeds. As we all know, these are entry-level sports coupes.

The most extreme example of how far current cars have come is perhaps the comparison between the sports car that started it all, the 1949 MGTC, and any modern automobile. What is unfair about this comparison is the fact that the TC was really a prewar design, with mechanical elements that dated back to the 1920s, but that's what people drove in the postwar era. I owned a MGTC that, in my estimation, was one of the most beautiful classic looking vehicles ever produced. It only had 54 horsepower and it felt like only 54 horsepower. It was slow. One trick was to lower the windshield to give one the illusion of speed. With your bare head in the breeze, 50 mph magically became at least 70. As slow as the old TC was, it had more charisma than 10 new and much faster Hondas.

Which brings me back to my original observation. New cars are better in so many ways, but they certainly lack the emotional appeal of some of the older cars. How can you compare the lines of the arguably attractive new Nissan 350Z to a PininFarina designed 1964 Ferrari Lusso? The new Mini is delightful, but it certainly lacks the chutzpah of the 1959 original. What new car can compare in any way to those fifties' art deco juke box cars with the lines of a '57 Chevy or the tailfins of a '59 Caddy? There is a reason manufacturers seem to be copying the designs of the older cars, like the new and hot selling Ford Mustang. It's the emotional appeal. It's the dream that you couldn't buy in '65 because you were too young. It was the car your dad or uncle owned. It was the car in which you took your driving lessons. It's the one you saw in a movie and had to have, the car that Cary Grant or Steve McQueen or Grace Kelly drove.

In the distant future, that shiny new Range Rover, Ford, Porsche or Jaguar in your driveway could possibly become someone's memory of the past. Some will be well preserved, but most will end up rusty old relics. Loaded with power accessories like GPS, ABS, fuel injection, climate control, computer controlled airbags and engine management systems, they sure will be bears to restore. But there are those who will restore them to keep the memory alive.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Fear Factor

Living on the planet has been kind of depressing lately. I just recently finished reading an article about global warming while having my breakfast this morning. The article, which was the lead article for USA Today, explained that the existence of global warming was no longer up for debate. The article said that all scientists agree that it is happening because almost human activity and that it will destroy us all. There seems to be a consensus that the earth is going to be ten degrees hotter by 2100 and that if we don't do something about it, we are all screwed. It also stated that the company General Electric is looking into the situation, and is going to be spending more money on environmental friendly research.

Well, isn't this a nice thing to wake up to in the morning? A little coffee, a bagel with cream cheese, and oh by the way, you are going to die a horrible death and your great-grandchildren are going to melt into the pavement. But hey, enjoy the coffee, even though it is one of your last cups.

It does not seem to stop at global warming, however. We've got the super flu that is coming for us. According to CNN.com, we are already ten years overdue for a super flu epidemic. It's as if CNN just felt like scaring the crap out of me by telling me this. It's like by the way, if you are feeling healthy, don't get too comfortable, a super flu is going to eat you and your family at any moment.

Terrorism. Every single day, terrorism. For the love of God, I get it. There are terrorists on the planet and they will blow themselves up and there is nothing I can do about it except think about how awful it would be if a terrorist blew me up. I understand that I could be out fishing and all of a sudden a giant, evil Muslim radical could fly out of the sky on a terrorist rocket, land on my boat, take off his turban and detonate both himself, me and all the fish that I caught that day. I better not go fishing anymore now that I think about it. I mean, you never know. Trust no one, anyone can be a terrorist. That guy over there sitting next to you is breathing funny. Watch him. Follow him. If you have to, shoot him.

Children. Having children is just a bad idea according to my news resources. MSN.com had an article revealing ways to be rich without actually having a lot of money. Their recommendation was a little surprising. MSN.com suggested to not even think about having kids, even if you are married and have a job. Nope, no kids. You can't afford them, they make you miserable, there are already enough people on the planet these days. Nothing good comes from them. People just act like they like them, they don't really like them. No children and no sex either. If you happen to get pregnant, we all feel secretly sorry for you, both of you.

I also, for some reason, need to constantly get the updates on nuclear weapons, both real and fake. The fake ones in Iraq are scary. You know they are there. They have to be there. We spent eighty billion jillion buzzgillion dollars on a war about fake bombs. We have admitted that they are fake bombs. Nevertheless, scary as all hell. Like a kid wielding a toy gun. Shoot the kid, that's what I say. It's his fault for making me think that it was actually a real gun. The bombs in North Korea are no big deal though because they are the real ones. Wouldn't make any sense to try and strong arm North Korea, not really worth stressing over.

Don't drink the water, you will die a horrible cancerous death. Don't drink the water, don't have salmon, don't eat the clams from Nantucket, don't have canned tuna, don't eat a steak. Forget McDonalds, and if you even think about having a candy bar, your body will become instantaneously fat, nobody will ever want to be friends with you, and you will die, alone, from diabetes.

I almost forgot about the asteroid that is going to kill us all, but then again, nobody really talks about that anymore. Do we have the whole asteroid situation under control? I really don't know. But an asteroid isn't really that scary. You die quickly, you don't see it coming. Also, everyone dies. It's not like terrorism where only a couple of your friends die or you die. We are all in the same boat when it comes to an asteroid colliding into the earth and detonating the planet.

There is a way to prevent all of this from happening though. Make money. If you make money, you can prevent all of these things from happening to you. You can buy a nuclear shelter, you can buy medicine, weight loss videos, you can pay off the terrorists, you can buy a magic wand and wish away global warming. So make sure that you just work as hard as you can, live in fear and do nothing out of the ordinary, like talking to someone you don't know.

OVER THE RIVER AND THROUGH THE WOODS WITH KEN KINDLER

Five Corners

The "Five Corners" in Southampton where Magee Street, West Neck Road, and Millstone Brook Road converge is a great jumping off point for several lovely hikes.

It would be great if someday there were to be parking, rest facilities, an information kiosk, maps, and an integrated network of trails accessible from here.

Last week I introduced you to three contiguous areas in which to hike: Emma Rose Elliston Town Park, Wolf Swamp, and Big Woods. This week, I'd like to share with you a couple of other beautiful places to hike close to the "Five Corners."

Tuckahoe Hill Preserve, an area in excess of 100 acres with a wide range of plant and animal life, can be reached from the intersection of North Magee and Sebonac Road across from the Tuckahoe Elementary School. A couple of years ago, by cooperative effort between the Town and The Southampton Trails Preservation Society, a lovely trail system was built here.

Tuckahoe Swamp is another 100-acre preserve with extensive wetlands that can be reached by traveling west from the Big Woods parking area to the intersection of Millstone Brook Road and Millstone Brook Street. The entrance to the new trail is on the north side of Millstone Brook Road.

Both Tuckahoe Hill and Tuckahoe Swamp have extensive wetlands. Tuckahoe Hill has a string of ponds while Tuckahoe Swamp has low wetlands tied together by picturesque brooks. Many inner woods and water dependent birds make these preserves their home during the summer.

Tuckahoe Swamp has an easy-to-follow trail. It is marked by blazes showing black owls on a white background. It travels through both wetlands and upland woods. There are many streams and the woods have a luxurious, dense green canopy. The 1.5 mile trail is not a loop (because wetlands block the return path) but rather a semi-circle with two entrances, 500 yards apart, along Millstone Brook Road. There are a number of simple, well-built bridges to take you over the streams. This hike is a birder's dream; walk quietly and listen to their songs. Informal parking is along the shoulder of the road.

Tuckahoe Hill has stands of red maples, tupelo, pitch pine, and beech as well as extensive stands of oak and hickory forest. Many chestnut trees persist despite the devastating fungal blight that keeps them from maturing. The freshwater ponds support amphibians such as salamanders, toads, and frogs. A wide variety of animal life including owls, foxes, and snakes thrive here because of the diversity of habitats.

The entrance to the trail is on Sebonac Road opposite the school. This is an interesting and lovely place to explore despite the fact that in recent years the trail has suffered from vandals removing the STPS owl blazes and from ATV riders ripping the woods to make trails where there shouldn't be any. Just two years ago, an easy-to-follow trail network had been put in place. This is only one example of why the trails on Long Island need the attention and assistance of caring nature lovers like you. Bring along a sense of adventure for this hike; be willing to wander and to follow a variety of trails. Since the area is bordered by several major roads, so you can't get lost for long. Bring a road map to help you find your way back. Instead of wandering, you could take the dirt road that leads directly to a 130-foot overlook, where you can see the Peconic Estuary, Robin's Island, and the North Fork of Long Island. A viewing platform of modest height would enhance the quality of the view dramatically. With some experimentation you could even create your own loop leading to this overlook.

These are just two of the lovely areas close to the "Five Corners." You could return to this area repeatedly and discover beautiful places to hike. Get out your road atlas and check the map to see what I'm describing. Starting by traveling west from North Sea Rd by Millstone Brook Rd., you come to Elliston Park; at the Scott's Rd./ Millstone Brook Rd. intersection you come to Big Woods and Wolf Swamp; From "Five Corners", travel south on N. Magee St. and you will come to the entrance of Tuckahoe Hill Preserve. If, however, you continue straight through the "Five Corners" on Millstone Brook Rd., it will take you to Tuckahoe Swamp opposite Millstone Brook Street.

You are in for days of beautiful adventures in the woods - Enjoy!

From The Runway By Kelly Krieger

The Colorful World of Fashion

Color and fashion work hand in hand. The color of your outfit can create a strong presence and enhance your appearance because color creates harmony and energy. There is a psychology behind every color and each one displays a different aura. And in fashion, there is sort of a "psychology" behind a chosen color.

The old rule of thumb that one can't wear white before Memorial Day or after Labor Day still lingers in the minds of many, but in fashion, rules are meant to be broken (or perhaps there are no real rules). Many top designers prefer to use white because of its pure reflection of light. Calvin Klein has always used white and natural hues for his lines. Linens are most popular because they are lightweight and durable. When it comes to wrinkles, there's no avoiding them. Cotton and cotton blends also stand out as the weather warms up. White can be mixed with any color and will always stay in fashion. As for the dreaded "stain" factor, that's always the downfall.

When caring for white clothing, it's best to avoid using harsh chemical bleach. There are natural safe bleach cleaning products available in health stores as well as bleach alternative detergents in your local grocer. It is recommended to add a 1/2 cup of lemon juice to a load of laundry or 1/2 cup vinegar in the finishing rinse to help maintain the brightness of the fabric.

In 2005, pink has become quite the hot color. I personally found myself buying everything from pink pants to pink shoes and handbags. Not everyone can wear pink and most red haired women would never dare to do so (that is with the exception of Molly Ringwald in the famous Pretty in Pink flick in the mid 80s). However, for those who wear the color well, it creates a graceful and romantic vibe. Pink can be worn with black for a drastic contrast or pale blue or yellow for a more uplifting effect.

For a more powerful and authoritative approach, black is the choice. Black is probably the most worn color because it makes you look thinner, it's classic and will always stay in style and it can be matched with anything. There is no such thing as too many pairs of black pants or shoes.

And let's not forget about the little black dress that was originally introduced by Coco Chanel in 1926. Before that time, black was only to be worn at funerals or when people were in mourning. But now, everyone must have a little black dress in their closet. It works for any occasion and any time of year. It is a timeless fashion item that will be in style for eternity. There's even been a book written titled Little Black Dress by author Amy H. Eldelman.

For those high-powered business men and women, blue has always been a tradition. The color blue is most popular because it evokes a tranquil and peaceful (calming) presence. Most business executives own several blue suits. Blue is the number one choice to wear on a job interview. Everyone can wear this color. Of course the paler shades of blue will differ and are usually used more in spring fashions.

Green and various shades thereof are used more frequently by designers and manufacturers. Here's where redheads take the lead, especially with a jewel (emerald) shade. Did someone say purple? Yes, that's correct. In fact, a good friend of mine wears purple all the time. It makes sense to me because purple is a color of luxury, femininity and sparks a romantic flare.

Yellow is a difficult choice, unless you're Kate Blanchett at the 2005 Oscar's sporting that buttercup (pale) yellow dress by Valentino. She obviously made the perfect selection.

Color and style are essential parts of any wardrobe. As we discover over time through personal experience, we don't always look our best in certain shades. Find the color that works best with your hair and skin tones and stick to it. BUT, don't be afraid to be daring once in a while; it can be liberating.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Water, water, everywhere, but not a drop to drink.....I have never wanted a rainstorm like I want it now. The trees are piled with pollen, the plants and shrubs are dry, everything is in need of some water. But.....not to fret, it's perfect weather for shopping! Let's do it.

If you love, love, love jewelry, mark your calendar for June 18 at 10 a.m. for a Jewelry Auction at the Southampton Inn at 91 Hill Street. For one day only, there will be over 400 pieces of jewelry set in 14k and 18k gold and platinum from estates, bankruptcies, unclaimed safe deposit boxes, etc. For information call them at 800-809-6459.

If you want something refreshing in country gifts, furniture and cottage décor, stop in to The Little Frame Shoppe Gone Country on Hampton Road in Southampton for exactly that! This shop has so much to offer, including custom framing. They are open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Stop in and see for yourself and let me know via e-mail what you think.

At Bernadette O'Brien on Hampton Road in Southampton, you will find a sale going on right now. The shop has a huge selection of fabrics for upholstery and drapery to choose from.

Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton is having a sale on their quality furniture and accessories. I am looking for a special size cupboard, and I can't think of a better place to save some dollars than with this sale.

At the Elaine Benson Sculpture Garden

The ARF Thrift Shop on Montauk Highway in Water Mill is having a 50% off everything in the shop sale. Now is the time to skip the tag and yard sales and head here for oldies but goodies and more..

Summer madness has arrived at Marder's garden center on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton. Finally, the weather is perfect for pottery plantings on the patio and deck. And.....there is 30% off selected pottery here at Marders, so get planting. And don't miss out on their weekly specials on plant material. They boast people, pet and planet friendly landscape organic solutions.

Back on Main Street (across from the Post Office) in Bridgehampton, I am happy to see that Kimberly Goff has re-opened her once very popular vintage clothing shop at the Elaine Benson Sculpture Garden. The shop is again filled to the rafters with hot vintage clothing and accessories that are quite the rage and sure to attract everyone, both young and old. Very affordable are the scarves and "good stuff" in the $5 to $10 range. You will love the kimonos, Victorian whites, vintage underwear, negligees, day and evening dresses, beaded bags, scarves, linens, Hawaiian shirts, lots of lace, jewelry, hair accessories and hankies. Coming soon will be new clothing made from vintage scarves and kimono fabrics. I can't wait for that one. The gallery still has paintings, sculpture, ceramics, jewelry, African masks and artifact and Indian hangings. The shopping hours are from noon to six p.m., Friday through Tuesday. Stop in and say hi to Kimberly; she will be happy to see you!

If you're heading east, you must stop at The Down

Factory Store At The Elegant John on Montauk Highway in East Hampton for some real dollar saving buys. There is a "gigantic summer sale" in progress on goosedown featherbeds, comforters, and pillows at 50% off. I bought my featherbed here, and I have to thank owners Richard and Frank every night when I plop into my bed after a full day of bargain and sale hunting. The store also has mattress pads, box spring covers, towels and rugs, bath accessories, terry cloth robes, mirrors, shower curtains, porcelain lamps, hangers, hampers and so much more. It's a one-stop-shop for bed and bath. Trust me on this one.

Bella Casa, Fine Italian Furnishings, on Bay Street in Sag Harbor, has a huge selection of inventory for the home and garden. There are beautiful indoor furnishings such as hutches, tables, and hanging lamps. And a huge shipment of outdoor tables and urns for the garden and patio has just arrived. I'm there!

On the Long Wharf in Sag Harbor at Needful Things, the owner Diana has scoured Paris to find unique treasures for the home and garden. The shop is filled with beautiful furniture, lamps, tables, chairs, home accessories and more. Everything is very affordable, neat, clean and ready to find a place in your home. Right now they are open from Thursday through Monday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. After June 20, seven days a week.....

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Sale Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, I would love to know hear from you. E-mail me at Shoptil@danspapers.com or by fax at: 631-537-7650.

BAKER HOUSE 1650 - EAST HAMPTON

The magnificently refurbished Baker House 1650 (formerly the J. Harper Poor Cottage) in East Hampton has been recognized as one of the finest luxury inns in the United States. It was named "Inn of the Month" by Travel and Leisure magazine. Each bedroom is beautifully decorated, with individually controlled central air conditioning and heat, Bartech minibar, in-room security safe and so much more. Bathrooms are lavish, with amenities by L'Occitane and bathrobes by Mascioni.

The last thing one would expect in a historic 1648 house is a state-of-the-art spa facility, but this is what one finds on descending the paneled staircase leading to the lower level. A lap pool, spa tub, sauna, steam shower, and changing room comprise the spa.

The inn is also available for special events including weddings, private parties, and photo shoots. Caterers, event planners, and musicians are provided to help you create an equally memorable day. For business meetings or family gatherings, the inn has a luxurious living room with a large fireplace.

The Baker House, located at 181 Main, East Hampton, is open year 'round. Call 631-324-4081 or log onto www.bakerhouse1650.com for complete information.

BRADY DESIGN SOUTHAMPTON

Brady Design, located in Southampton, is a special home design studio that offers a full architecture and interior design service. In addition, this brand new shop has its own line of custom upholstery, which is fine bench-made and fully customizable in as little as eight week's time. They offer a full line of fine English bed linens with various embroidery and piping options, as well as custom sizes to fit any bed. This can be done for you in as little as four weeks. Also available are fine Irish linens in plain white. Included in this mix as well are one-of-a-kind antiques and accessories from "sentimento antiques" that include 17th, 18th, and 19th century pieces from Italy, France, Sweden and England. Brady Design is located at 22 Main Street, Southampton. Call 283-3111 for information.

JADE NECTAR EAST - SOUTHAMPTON

Opened this past Memorial Day weekend in Southampton, Jade Nectar East gallery features the work of artist Lana Santorelli, a resident of Southampton and Manhattan.

The works on exhibit in Southampton are visionary, the artist expressing herself from this very personal perception of inner life, dreams, feelings, and reality. Sculpture will be on view in addition to a collection of paintings in this inaugural exhibition. Throughout the summer, a continually rotating selection of small works by local artists will be on display in the back of the gallery.

The current exhibition will be on view through July 4th weekend. Regular hours are Thursday-Monday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and always by appointment.

Jade Nectar East opens the gallery with a celebratory cocktail party this Saturday, June 11, from 6 to 8 p.m., featuring an exhibition of works by Lana Santorelli.

Jade Nectar East is located at 77 Jobs Lane in Southampton or visit www.jadenectar.com.

HARMONT & BLAINE - SOUTHAMPTON

After a series of openings throughout the world, from Miami to Canton and passing through Capri, Athens, and Taipei on the way, Harmont & Blaine, an international luxury men's wear brand based in Naples, Italy, is proud to have opened their doors in an 800 square foot space in Southampton. The shop is filled with luxury men's clothing, shoes, and accessories for every occasion. These items are synonymous with elegance and are a natural fit. This is the luxury-lifestyle brand's first location in the northeast, with only one other store in the United States, in Coral Gables, Florida. "Harmont & Blaine's brand epitomizes the lifestyle of the fashion-forward, sophisticated consumers of the Hamptons."

Harmont & Blaine is located at 38 Jobs Lane, Southampton.

BATISTE HAIR SALON - SAG HARBOR

New to Sag Harbor's Main Street, The Batiste Hair Salon brings fresh talent and some unusual features such as separate children's salon, S. Batiste & Tots, which caters to kids. Open and airy with twelve-foot ceilings and sleek furnishings, the shop is offering new services that include natural hair extensions and Japanese hair straightening and updos. Patrons can also enjoy current art exhibits and surfing the web on new laptops that are provided by the salon. Owner Jackie Fuchs has fused her interest in hair styling, children, and art to create a salon that is creative and fun. The little ones can watch DVDs while getting their hair cut. For first timers, Jackie's staff films the big event and gives parents both the DVD and a lock of the baby's hair in a stylish box, complete with their name and the date printed on it. They even host children's hair cutting parties where kids can experiment with fun fantasy styles & washable haircolor. A special children's art gallery decorates the walls of S. Batiste & Tots.

Batiste Hair Salon or Batiste & Tots is located at 75 Main Street, 631-725-9494, or visit them on the web at www.batistesalon.com

CPR: It Saves Lives

Summer weather is here and many people have already opened their pools or headed for the beach. For those who have small children, this is an important time to keep a close watch on the little ones for obvious safety reasons. Taking your eyes off the kids for even the shortest length of time can be a dangerous choice.

Trying to juggle your job, food shopping, paying the bills and cleaning the house can be stressful enough without taking on an additional responsibility. However, if this added responsibility could save someone's life, maybe it's worth considering.

Learning how to perform CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) is a life-changing experience. There are many classes offered through local organizations and it's something that will be embedded in your mind for years to come.

Approximately 4,000 people drown each year in the United States. Several hundred of these occur alone in bathtubs. Drowning is the number one cause of death for young children. Nearly 5,000 children each year are hospitalized for near-drowning experiences and almost 300 of those children don't make it.

Several weeks ago my phone rang at 7:50 a.m. on a Saturday and I was startled, to say the least. "Get up, you're coming to CPR class with me at 9 a.m.," said my friend Kathy. I was barely coherent, but she wouldn't take no for an answer. We arrived at Pierson High School in Sag Harbor. Kathy, Catherine, Maritza, and I filled out forms and sat in back of the class in the school's gymnasium while listening to Susan Denis (Health Teacher at the High School) explain the basics of CPR.

The only memory I have of CPR was when we had to take it in High School for gym class. Images of Mr.

Michelbank slobbering all over the "dummy" resurfaced. Today they have handy little cover-ups that are used for sanitary purposes and alcohol wipes as well (I think we at least had those back then).

For this session, approximately a half dozen students that were CPR certified were on hand to assist. After each segment, we would practice what we had just learned on the mannequin; assessing the situation, rescue breathing (mouth-to-mouth resuscitation), and chest compressions.

CPR can restore the circulation of oxygen-rich blood to the brain. The absence of oxygen to the brain for an extended period of time (can occur in less than 8 minutes) will result in brain damage or death. Our class was intended to give a basic understanding of how to perform procedures and what techniques are used to do so.

First thing is to ask, "Are you OK? Are you OK?" (As you shake the victim.) You call 911.

The first and most important step is to assess the situation. Safety for both you and the victim is essential. For example, if you arrive at a car accident situation, there are many factors to consider before moving anyone or anything. Hopefully the emergency vehicle will be on its way and that's why it's important to call 911 first. They will assist you and guide you through any immediate steps.

The three basic parts to remember about CPR are as simple as ABC. These are the steps that are taught and demonstrated in CPR class (this should not be performed on a victim unless you have been properly certified or have taken an official class).

A represents the airway. It is important that the victim's airway be open in order to restore breathing. There may be an obstruction by food or another object and sometimes this step alone will start the victim breathing.

B stands for rescue breathing. Breathing into the victim's mouth with the correct technique and procedure taught in class will force air into the lungs.

C is for Circulation. If breathing rescue breaths doesn't work, chest compressions are the next step.

All of these steps and procedures are different for infants and children. Qualified instructors from the American Heart Association offer classes throughout the year. If you can't fit a class into your schedule immediately, read as much as you can and take every safety precaution possible. Just think, learning CPR can assist you in saving someone's life one day.

The Essence of Essential Oils

The scent of lemongrass will always carry me back, across borders and over mountains, to a beautiful farm in Costa Rica. When I was working on this organic farm, we spent the mornings with machetes in hand, cutting through fields of lemongrass. The aroma filled my senses as we harvested the citrusy plant. We carried armfuls down into a valley, where the distillation plant was set up. There, a man who devoted his life to essential oils processed the lemongrass through distillation, and in a cylindrical vessel, droplets of oil began to appear. These droplets were then bottled and labeled as organic essential oils.

Every essential oil has different effects. According to AromaWeb, lemongrass oil is effective in alleviating depression, helping with fatigue and exhaustion, easing a sense of fear, increasing happiness and peace, and improving memory and concentration.

How, you ask, can an oil have all of these positive benefits? When carefully inhaled (usually after being diluted and always after being well-informed), molecules from the essential oil enter the lungs and are absorbed into the blood stream. The naturally occurring synergistic chemicals that exist in the oils provide triggers in our brains, which, in turn, affect our emotions.

One thing to be aware of is that an essential oil may have a said effect, but if you have an association with that scent, your reaction is going to be influenced. For example, I am certainly going to feel the benefits of lemongrass because my experience with it was so positive. But if, while I was harvesting lemongrass on that farm, something tragic or negative had happened, then I would probably not reap the benefits when smelling lemongrass again. My association would overwhelm the effects that a neutral person would gain.

Essential oils are usually distilled by steam or water from natural ingredients like leaves, flowers, roots, or other elements of a plant. Some essential oils are very expensive because of the rarity of the plant or the difficulty in extracting the oil. For example, ylang-ylang is a deliciously flowery oil that has been known to alleviate anxiety, depression, frigidity, hypertension, and stress. It is usually steam distilled. On the same farm where we harvested lemongrass, there grew thousands of ylang-ylang flowers. But for every flower that was harvested, only one small drop of oil could be extracted. Therefore, a small bottle of ylang-ylang oil, particularly the organic oil produced on this farm, can be pretty expensive.

An essential oil is organic if it has been extracted from plants that were grown without the use of pesticides. Non-organic essential oils probably still have some of the chemicals that treated the plant in them. There are arguments that pesticides don't show up in the oils, but personally, I think we are exposed to enough chemicals. We don't need to be rubbing them on our skin or breathing them into our lungs when we're trying to do something healthy. Since it is still more expensive for farmers to grow organic, it will probably cost more to buy organic essential oils.

While lemongrass and ylang-ylang have more emotional and psychological effects, other essential oils have more physical benefits. Clary sage, for example, can be used for asthma, coughing, sore throat, gas, and labor pains. It has a bright, herbaceous scent and is extracted through steam distillation. Lavender, also steam distilled, has a plethora of both physical and emotional benefits. Some physical effects include the alleviation of acne, allergies, asthma, bruises, scars, earache, labor pains, headache, chicken pox, and colic. On the emotional side, lavender eases stress and depression.

The use of essential oils is integral to aromatherapy, which has become more popular in recent decades. Aromatherapy has a tendency to be misunderstood, and vendors sometimes sell any nice-smelling fragrances under the guise that they have the benefits of aromatherapy. However, holistic aromatherapy does not employ the use of any unnatural products. Instead, it calls for volatile plant oils, of which essential oils are some, to improve psychological and physical states. These practices are not miraculous, though. Aromatherapy is not meant to replace traditional medical practices, but rather, to be used in conjunction with them. While employing essential oils will not cure cancer, the use of clary sage could ease depression, the use of frankincense could help to ease fear, and the use of lavender could alleviate nausea, all associated with cancer.

Even when we were harvesting lemongrass in the hills, the evenings always dripped with the fragrance of ylang-ylang. And it was in the evenings that I stretched out on a hammock with Tom Robbins' Skinny Legs and All and inhaled the smell of paradise. So I bottled up the evening and carried it home, and now whenever I need the happy association of ylang-ylang and all the benefits that accompany it, I just open up the bottle and breathe in.

Amazing Ideas for an Outdoorsy Dad

The best thing about Father's Day, besides celebrating your Dad, is the weather. The summer is in full swing and nothing beats getting out and doing something active. Kayak in Three Mile Harbor, fish the Race, or just lounge around in a hammock. This year make Father's Day special for the Dad in your life. Think Big! He's worth it.

Penn offers a full line of fishing reels and nothing goes better with a fishing pole than a boat. The Sea Ray 280 Sundancer will get you out on the water in style. Looking for something a little smaller? Try Stewart River's Northern Light wooden kayak. If the water's not your thing, there are always the links. With Ping's S59 irons he's bound to shave strokes off his game. And when the day's all done, give him the comfort of a Sunbrella Hammock to kick back and relax. -- CM

Dan's HOME

Paved With Gold

The first thing that people notice when entering your home is not the front of your house or your front door. Nope, the very first thing that a guest notices when going to your house is your driveway. All too often, the layout of a driveway is at the end of the list when updating or building a home.

A driveway presents a wonderful opportunity to make your home as beautiful as it possibly can be. There are incredible landscaping opportunities, such as planting trees along your driveway. Driveways are also an opportunity to use statues or artistic structures that can be placed at the driveway entrance or placed along the way. A Balian statue, such as the ones sold at Taman Batu in Southampton, makes for an excellent accent to your driveway indeed.

Although there are many different types of materials that can be used to lay out a driveway, we will start with the basics: standard black pavement. It is easy to maintain and it is inexpensive in comparison to other material, but it is also a little boring. Another important note is that anything that gets on the black pavement is easily noticeable. So if you are a beachgoer and sand seems to enjoy jumping out of your car onto your driveway, black pavement is not the best way to go.

A really exciting material that can be used for driveways is brick. There are several different types of brick; the more common ones are flagstone, cobblestone and red brick. Bricks create a no-slip surface that is perfect for driveways, and they also look nice. Bricks are also great because they can be laid out in all different types of patterns, which makes bricklaying your driveway an art form. This has its benefits if you enjoy "painting" your driveway with bricks. If you can't think of a style layout on your own, you can always copy the different ways of laying out the bricks from other roads or driveways that you see around town or in other towns. There are other advantages when using brick, such as their ability to be replaced should they get damaged.

Another way you can lay down your driveway is with stone. Stone makes for a gorgeous driveway because it gives it a very old-fashioned and organic feel. Be sure that when choosing a stone, you opt for angular stone instead of round stone. This is because round stones can be dislodged from the driveway and roll away much more easily. You can also mix and match the different stone to make the driveway unique. Should you decide to choose stone, keep in mind that it is difficult to clean.

Wood chips, dirt, and compressed earth are what many of us think of when we think of driveways. While these are the least expensive materials to lay out a driveway, they are also the most difficult to maintain and when not drained properly, can cause pooling and also large ruts. This writer can vouch for this, growing up in a home with a driveway laid out with wood chips. It was a very bumpy ride the whole way through.

Believe it or not, concrete is a material that makes for excellent driveways and is sometimes not given enough credit. Concrete can be shaped anyway you want it to be and can also be colored anyway that you want it to be colored, making it an excellent material for the driveway connoisseur. If you are looking to play basketball on your driveway but don't like black pavement, concrete may be the way to go. You can also create molds of concrete that interlock perfectly but look as if they were as random as a stone driveway. This makes concrete a definite possibility when it comes to driveways.

Finally, we have the pavers. Pavers are basically like brick except they interlock in the driveway perfectly, which means you won't feel it underneath you while driving on it in the way that stone and brick do. Pavers are excellent for those who do not want the hassle of a stone or brick driveway, but also do not want the boringness of pavement. It is also much easier to maintain and creates an old-fashioned feel.

Whatever driveway style you choose, just remember that choosing what you want your driveway to be like is a fun process. Be sure to enjoy the process of creating your driveway, for this will lead to even greater satisfaction when the project is complete.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Magical, Easy Summer Garden Plant

What would the world be without the welcome sight of biennials that create spectacular color and presence in the early summer garden? Biennials not only create a bold display; they attest to a gardener's planning and provide early summer composition and mass that cannot be achieved by annuals.

One of the easiest biennials to grow is digitalis (also called foxglove). It is ideally suited to acidic, East End soils and is a versatile plant that thrives in both sun and shade. Because the plant is toxic, it is shunned by voles, moles, and deer. Moreover, foxglove produces the most wonderful, large, showy spikes of thimble-like flowers in a variety of colors. Nothing is more magical than a grouping of these flowers!

Digitalis purpurea, the common garden variety of foxglove, produces flower stalks as tall as five feet high. A single plant may produce several spikes of different heights. Each flower stalk is lined with flowers in colors of white, yellow, apricot, pink, lavender, or purple. Individual flowers are about an inch or so in diameter and are mottled on the interior wall with dots of crimson, chocolate, or burgundy.

The botanical name, digitalis, comes from the Latin word digitatus that means finger. The individual flowers do look like snippets of glove ends. All parts of the plant contain the alkaloid digitoxin, commercially used to produce the heart medication called "digitalis."

Since foxglove is a biennial, it typically blooms in the second year after germination. However, when started in a greenhouse or cold frame, the plant may bloom in the first season. A hybrid strain called "Foxy" was developed to bloom the first season and is treated as an annual plant. This strain sometimes survives winter and blooms again the second season – though never with the vigor of the original strains. Digitalis ambigua, a long-lived variety of foxglove, has yellow flowers that appear in June/July and frequently continue blooming into fall.

Foxglove can be purchased from most of the East End nurseries now. While this produces immediate gratification, it does not produce the most vigorous specimens – which are those started in fall or winter. (There is every reason to start this plant from seed, since it is so easy. In fact, the plant will re-seed itself easily if the seed pods are left to mature.)

Foxglove seed is very tiny, but easy to handle when mixed with a little sand. We gather seeds from existing flowers when the seed capsules mature in August/September. (Viable seeds fall easily into a paper envelope when the seed pods are shaken.) Be aware that the dominant color for foxglove is purple, so plants tend to return to that color over time. We, therefore, purchase new seeds on a yearly basis to add to the variety of colors and to fend off the tendency of next-generation plants to return to the dominant, purple color.

We typically set our seeds in January as the winter thaw occurs. Seeds can be sown at the backs of borders or where they will eventually bloom. These seeds establish seedlings in spring (we've had a 50% success rate). We also sprinkle seeds in woodland areas near the house and along the road sides, where they seem to do well, and self-propagate over time.

We sow seeds in the greenhouse during March (these plants do especially well the first season and create enormous, spectacular blooms the second season). Planting seeds in the greenhouse produces plants to transplant to the garden in late April.

Foxglove requires light to germinate so seeds should not be covered when planting. (This means that seeds sown directly in the garden will not germinate until late in March.) Sprinkle seeds on the top of soil and press lightly to help them adhere. Use a sterile potting mix to prevent fungus that causes dampening off. (Use a copper fungicide mixed with water to help fend off the fungus on seeds sown in containers.)

When germinated in the greenhouse, seedlings can be relocated in the border in late April – after two sets of leaves appear. Plant seedlings in groupings, spaced ten or so inches apart.

Digitalis is one of the easiest and most rewarding of the biennials. It provides spectacular blooms that create a great garden effect. This plant receives our highest recommendation as a "must have" for the early summer garden.

Treasures from the Orient

On top of beautiful beaches, golf courses, and celebrities, our Hamptons are known for residents with a true appreciation for the finer things. The standard of living here is a couple of notches higher, and not just for those lucky folks south of the highway. Even if you buy your clothes at LVIS or weekend yard sales, there's a distinct possibility you'll be wearing Gucci or at least Brooks Brothers, among other high-end finds. The same goes for our homes. You don't have to have a post-modern shingle style mansion to have good taste. One of the easiest ways to lift your residence up to the next level is with a well-chosen, high quality rug. In the words of the Big Lebowski, "It really ties the room together." Even the Dude had a good, albeit soiled, Oriental rug. You should too.

Oriental rugs are pretty self-explanatory. By definition, they are rugs made in the Orient. The hand-made beauties are generally manufactured in one of seven major regions. Iran, Pakistan, India, Turkey, China, Afghanistan, and the Caucasian areas like Russia and Kazak are known for their quality of craftsmanship, rich color, and practical durability. Mark Anthony of Mark Anthony Rugs in Wainscott explains that all good Oriental rugs should be made of wool or wool and silk, with all natural dyes. "The dyes come from plants, fruits, nuts, grains and vegetables," he said while leaning against a tall stack of carpets in his well-lit and accessible shop. "Whatever the region has to offer." He continued by saying that each rug can take months or even years to create, with up to seven million knots in a single colorfully patterned piece, some of which are hundreds of years old.

One gorgeous effort featured a camel hair trim, which Anthony said was one of the most unexpectedly resistant and tough materials available. Wool Oriental rugs have their own natural defenses against stains and wear. The fabric has inherent lanolin that acts as a kind of Scotch-Guard against these problems, and cleaning and care couldn't be simpler.

Mr. Anthony insists that chemical cleaners and dry and steam cleaning can strip the natural protection. Instead, he says that hosing down your rug on a sunny day or a little club soda for spot cleaning is more than enough. The rugs wear from the bottom up, so a floor pad is also a good idea.

Now is a good time for the business and rug shopping. The Clinton Administration lifted the U.S. embargo against Iranian carpets, opening up a wide range of great Persian exports to our country. There are over 60 rug-producing cities in Iran, as well as many smaller villages that bring their crafts into the larger areas where they are appropriated under the banner of that city. The import industry is known for their united cooperation that allows dealers to find exactly what their customers are looking for. Mr. Anthony has over 31 years in the business, and his ties to the regions of rug production are strong. His people scour the countries for the best work they can find, but it is the connection to other dealers that gives him almost infinite choices. Each region is uniquely identifiable by the style of their work. Peshawar rugs out of the Khyber Pass are one of the two top selling rugs in the U.S., and the number one in the Hamptons. Known for their cool designs that in many ways resemble American Folk art, the Peshawar pieces have a casual and fun aura about them that fits in with the country aesthetic we all love. Other stand-outs include the reversible and flexible Sennah, valuable old Serapi, Oushak, Saruk, and Heriz rugs.

Mark Anthony Rugs has been open since September, and resides in the old Wilson's Antiques Red Barn in Wainscott. After years on the antique show circuit, and pressure from East End clients he describes as "relaxed, discerning, and easy to work with," Anthony moved back to a place where he has lived and loved for years. The Oriental rugs available on the market today vary widely in price, and homeowners should consider the many possibilities from which they can curate their floors. There is nothing more individualized for a house than an original hand made rug — no two are exactly alike. Mark Anthony Rugs is located at 372 Montauk Highway.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

The Peconic Land Trust is an organization dedicated to the preservation of land on the eastern end of Long Island. The Land Trust, established in 1983 by John H. Halsey, has proved to be one of the most effective land conservation groups in the United States and is responsible for saving more than 8000 acres of land here. The group works proactively with local farmers, land owners and government agencies to protect vulnerable parcels of land. The Trust plans to secure another 10,000 acres in the near future by continuing its work in bringing others to a clearer understanding of the importance of land conservation. The group has recently applied a new approach to its list by combining its efforts with East End realtors.

This week The Corcoran Group's Hampton offices, of which there are 13 throughout the Hamptons and North Fork, committed to the Land Trust to not only contribute on the monetary level but to blend their expertise in hopes of forming a working relationship in the name of preservation. In this partnership, the realtor offers access to buyers, sellers and capital, and the Land Trust in return will lend their expertise as well as educate brokers on the very sensitive subject of land preservation. East End properties are sought after only because they are so beautifully unique. Each area on the East End is distinctive, whether it be wetlands, shoreline, farm acreage or village. The value of land here has reached astronomical heights. However, the land that has turned to gold will only remain so if it kept golden.

This past week, in honor of the formation of this partnership, the Corcoran Group and the Trust celebrated in Bridgehampton by way of a luncheon at the home of Corcoran Broker Emma Clurman. Members of the Land Trust, including Mr. Halsey, spoke. Pamela Leibman, CEO of Corcoran and long time East Ender, explained, "We did not come out here trying to sell every house possible but to be a part of what makes the East End so special." She went on to say that her mission here is to keep the beauty and the dream that is the Hamptons alive.

Others realtors, such as Prudential Douglas Elliman in Southold, have taken on similar attitudes where land sales are concerned. Realtors and preservationists many times work hand in hand in the delicate handling of wetlands or surplus acreage.

Colony Realty in Jamesport is known for the brokering of equestrian properties, which can have a whole other set of considerations. Some brokers, such as Syma Joffe Gerard on the North Fork, deal exclusively with land and require the knowledge of putting together a vineyard or some other land based business. It is not uncommon for vineyards or farms to have restrictions on land, and many of them have limited development rights. Townships often buy land rights in order to insure the protection of both historic significance and natural beauty.

The bottom line here is that if realtors want to continue to see the interest and the value on the East End, they need to help to protect what makes it what it is in the first place. It seems that more and more realtors see this as a win-win situation. They continue to survive, the land survives, the values survive and everyone is happy.

The Peconic Land Trust will be hosting the annual "Through the Farmfields Tour and Luncheon" in August this summer. Lunch is served in a riding arena at the Wild Ocean Farm, which is a 30-acre preserved horse farm owned by Kelly Klein and Stormy Byorum Good. This event is open to all and tours six beautifully preserved Hamptons properties including Deerfield Farm, a 57-acre nursery, and the 100-acre Mecox Dairy, both in Water Mill. The Halsey Family Farm will also be on the roster. Visitors will see the 10,000 apple trees that thrive on 65 acres in Water Mill. This land has been in the Halsey Family for 12 generations. Now, that is preservation!

THE FINE PRINT!

Have you ever read one of those travel agency ads that offer seven days: six nights in Paradise for a package price of $399? You may have also noticed the fine print in the ad: Airport transfers, taxes, tips, and departure tax not included. Although the basic cost of the trip is $399, there are other charges that must also be paid.

Buying a home also includes many out-of-pocket expenses beyond the agreed purchase price. While the down payment may be the largest expense attached to a home purchase, ask the real estate agent to provide an itemized list of other fees and expenses required to consummate the transaction, so that you don't experience any surprises.

Depending on the mortgage plan chosen, other charges may include: 1) loan origination fees, 2) advance deposits for taxes and insurance, 3) mortgage insurance fees, 4) recording fees, 5) fees for credit reports and appraisals required upon loan application, and 6) discount points. Some fees are figured as a percentage of the purchase price or loan amount, while others are a flat amount.

Only the closing attorney can calculate the exact amount needed to complete the transaction, but buyers should expect to receive an estimate of those costs for planning purposes from the real estate agent. Armed in advance with the necessary figures, buyers can plan their purchase with confidence.

If you are thinking about purchasing a property in Palm Beach, use the best! AUTHOR ACCOLADES

Dear Dan,

I really enjoyed Einstein's Thank You and the excerpted interview in the current issue of Dan's Papers.

Enclosed, please find a check for a copy of Albert Einstein's Summer Vacation. After talking with your office staff, I found out that you are the author of the book. I kind of suspected that, even though you didn't say it so many words in your column. I'm looking forward to reading it.

I have a suspicion that deep down, you are a scientist at heart. I recall previous stories that peaked my interest, from Ben Franklin's escapades as Postmaster on the North Fork, setting mile markers by the side of the road (did find a few between Riverhead and Mattituck), to the great work on animal disease at Plum Island, disappearing ships, an abandoned radar station and the plight of Plovers. Keep up the good work.

If you could find the time to personalize the book, I would appreciate it.

CHOCOLATE CHANGE?

Dear Dan,

Who gave you the idea that Nestle is German and from Hamburg? It has been Swiss for over 100 years and its international headquarters are in Vevey, Switzerland.

Maybe you are talking of Nestle after it's purchase by the E.U. Who knows, may be the Swiss will desert Switzerland. You need to keep the art lovers along with the art world informed and move to Hamburg. Everything is possible in this crazy world of super deregulation and traffic jams!

Keep up the good work. You are so prolific, you get me dizzy.

Thanks!

FREQUENT FLIER

Dear Dan,

Re: How Far Does Dan's Papers Travel Contest
Enclosed please find a page from the April 29, 2005 Dan's Papers for entering into your "How Far Does Dan's Papers Travel" contest.

I'm a native New Yorker who grew up going to my parent's weekend house on Sandune Court in Sagaponack and just recently my husband, Brian Henry (a native kiwi), and I brought our first home in East Hampton.

Anyhow, we live in New Zealand with our children, Brend and Lane, half the year and New York City and East Hampton the rest of the year. We figured it's possible that we've traveled further with Dan's Papers in our suitcases, than any of your other readers – so there it goes.

I'm sure you'll let us know if I won your contest. Thanks for allowing us to enter and for holding the contest. It's great fun for us.....and of course we love your paper. I've been reading it since I was a child.

LISTEN UP

Dear Dan,

I just want to let you know about several events last weekend that commemorated the 70th anniversary of FM radio and its inventor, my ancestor, Edwin Howard Armstrong, a visionary genius whose dramatic life ended tragically when he jumped from his River House apartment on East 52nd Street in 1954.

Sir Harold Evans, author of the book, They Made America, which includes a chapter on Uncle Howard, gave a lecture about Uncle Howard on Saturday, June 11 at 5:00 p.m. in St. Mark's Hall in Westhampton Beach, New York. My father and I provided an audio recording that Sir Harry used during the lecture.

Meanwhile, my father and I participated in a special June 11 radio broadcast on WFDU radio – hosted by 1010 WINS radio's Judy DeAngelis – at the Alpine, New Jersey transmitter Uncle Howard erected in the early 1930's to take his amazing FM technology to the airwaves. Also on air was Tom Lewis, author of the book, "Empire of the Air," about Uncle Howard; Lewis's book, incidentally, was the basis of a PBS show (of the same name) about Uncle Howard by noted historian Ken Burns.

This was a week of family pride – and a time to reflect on Uncle Howard's great achievement that endures to this day: FM technology is the basis of cell phone communication and communication in outer space.

Police Blotter

Beer Run Gone Wrong

It was all down hill after the booze ran out at a Maidstone Cottage on Bruce Lane. An emotionally charged argument broke out between two men over who would be forced off the couch to get reinforcements. A Sag Harbor resident picked the longer of two straws, but his victory dance was interrupted as he watched the loser retaliate by kicking and punching the side of his truck repeatedly. Although the police were called and the damage was in excess of $3,500, the victim did not press charges despite having a busted truck and no beer. Apparently the two long time drinking buddies have resolved their issues outside of the judicial system, and are now careful to stock the fridge earlier in the evenings.

Tables and Chairs and Teens Oh My!

Two youths trying to set up a lemonade stand in town decided to "borrow" a table and two chairs from Babette's restaurant on Newtown Lane. The police quickly apprehended the hapless hooligans and forced them to return the items, thus ruining their entrepreneurial venture.

* * *

Herrick Park Becomes Gang Territory

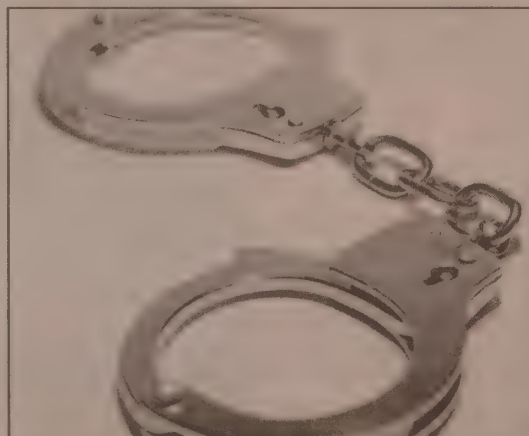

Like dogs marking a tree with urine, members of the illicit gang "The Latin Kings" decided to scratch the freshly painted Herrick Park gazebo on Newtown Lane with their initials before any rival gangs could lay claim to the prime real estate. The gazebo is once again without an official gang sponsor now that the engraved four by four piece of wood has been repainted.

* * *

One Bush Too Many

A disgruntled woman was up bright and early to hinder the progress of Bayberry Nursery at a job site on Montauk Highway in Amagansett. After running over two inkberry bushes with her Kia S.U.V. at 8:30 in the morning, the shrub shredder told workers not to plant trees on property they didn't own. She obviously loves gardening, and took it upon herself to prune the plants of a complete stranger with her car.

Getting Robbed for Nothing

The security company protecting a woman's house in Springs was nice enough to inform the resident that her house had been broken into. After returning to her home on Settlement Court she spent hours searching for stolen items, but to her surprise nothing was missing. However, a bathroom window valued at $500 was broken. Hopefully the spiteful scoundrels who broke the window made off with some valuable shards of glass to resell on eBay.

* * *

The Red Rider Rascals

A Montauk man was minding his own business traveling eastbound on South Euclid Avenue when the passenger window of his truck shattered in front of the Lido Motel. Two B.B. gun-toting teenagers were spotted soon after by police. The mischievous teens buckled under heavy interrogation and took credit for shooting at innocent bystanders. Seeing that the perpetrators weren't hired assassins, but merely misled youths, the understanding man decided not to press charges after their parents agreed to pay the $400 to fix his window.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpected motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an elliptical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.

The Berkshires are a Beautiful Place to Live

"Where nature sets the scene and culture steals the show."

The Berkshires Visitor's Guide 2005-2006

EXQUISITE VINTAGE HOME

Built in 1753 this home is believed to be the 2nd oldest home in Sheffield, MA. Owned by only three families, this is an authentic home not to be missed! It includes 2 properties. On the west side of the road is the colonial house with almost six acres, heated swimming pool, 4 car garage and beautiful grounds. On the east side, there is an authentic 2500 sq. ft. post and beam barn built entirely with authentic lumber also on 6 acres. Two stone fireplaces, first and second floor, a full bath, could be wonderful guest quarters.
This property includes two small ponds and possibly an additional building site (property could be broken up and sold separately)

Exclusively offered...$1,795,000
